the first biography to utilize the complete papers of margaret mead and ruth benedict since their release to scholars lois banner's intertwined lives traces the intellectual emotional and sexual relationship of these two women who have had such an enduring influence on anthropology and our understanding of society fourteen years mead's senior benedict possessed a mannish beauty wrote taught and succumbed to convention and married unhappily mead delighted in her femininity enjoyed the creative spark of difference was aggressive in her intellectual pursuits and married several times meeting in 1922 each found her companion of choice although they were often separated their bond remained intact until ruth's death banner tells the story of their mutual devotion to anthropology and to each other and shows how religion ethnicity intellectualism homosexuality maternity and success all played essential roles in their lives social and cultural anthropology and archaeology are rich subjects with deep connections in the social and physical sciences over the past 150 years the subject matter and different theoretical perspectives have expanded so greatly that no single individual can command all of it consequently both advanced students and professionals may be confronted with theoretical positions and names of theorists with whom they are only partially familiar if they have heard of them at all students in particular are likely to turn to the web to find quick background information on theorists and theories however most web based information is inaccurate and or lacks depth students and professionals need a source to provide a quick overview of a particular theory and theorist with just the basics the who what where how and why if you will in response sage reference plans to publish the two volume theory in social and cultural anthropology an encyclopedia features benefits two volumes containing approximately 335 signed entries provide users with the most authoritative and thorough reference resource available on anthropology theory both in terms of breadth and depth of coverage to ease navigation between and among related entries a reader's guide groups entries thematically and each entry is followed by cross references in the electronic version the reader's guide combines with the cross references and a detailed index to provide robust search and browse capabilities an appendix with a chronology of anthropology theory allows students to easily chart directions and trends in thought and theory from early times to the present suggestions for further reading at the end of each entry and a master bibliography at the end guide readers to sources for more detailed research and discussion between the turn of the twentieth century and the brown v board of education decision in 1954 the way that american schools taught about race changed dramatically this transformation was engineered by the nation's most prominent anthropologists including franz boas ruth benedict and margaret mead during world war ii inspired by scientific racism in nazi germany these activist scholars decided that the best way to fight racial prejudice was to teach what they saw as the truth about race in the institution that had the power to do the most good american schools anthropologists created lesson plans lectures courses and pamphlets designed to revise what they called the race concept in american education they believed that if teachers presented race in scientific and egalitarian terms conveying human diversity as learned habits of culture rather than innate characteristics american citizens would become less racist although nearly forgotten today this educational reform movement represents an important component of early civil rights activism that emerged alongside the domestic and global tensions of wartime drawing on hundreds of first hand accounts written by teachers nationwide zoe burkholder traces the influence of this anthropological activism on the way that teachers understood spoke and taught about race she explains how and why teachers readily understood certain theoretical concepts such as the division of race into three main categories while they struggled to make sense of more complex models of cultural diversity and structural inequality as they translated theories into practice teachers crafted an educational discourse on race that differed significantly from the definition of race produced by scientists at mid century schoolteachers and their approach to race were put into the spotlight with the brown v board of education case but the belief that racially integrated schools would eradicate racism in the next generation and eliminate the need for discussion of racial inequality long predated this discussions of race in the classroom were silenced during the early cold war until a new generation of antiracist multicultural educators emerged in the 1970s
