why does mark s jesus speak in parables why does plato s socrates make bad arguments why are beckett s novels so inscrutable and why don t stage magicians even pretend to summon spirits anymore in a series of captivating chapters on mark plato beckett mallarmé and chaucer joshua landy not only answers these questions but explains why they are worth asking in the first place witty and approachable how to do things with fictions challenges the widespread assumption that literary texts must be informative or morally improving in order to be of any real benefit it reveals that authors are sometimes best thought of not as entertainers or as educators but as personal trainers of the brain putting their willing readers through exercises designed to fortify specific mental capacities from form giving to equanimity from reason to faith delivering plenty of surprises along the way that moral readings of literature can be positively dangerous that the parables were deliberately designed to be misunderstood that plato knowingly sets his main character up for a fall that metaphor is powerfully connected to religious faith that we can sustain our beliefs even when we suspect them to be illusions how to do things with fictions convincingly shows that our best allies in the struggle for more rigorous thinking deeper faith richer experience and greater peace of mind may well be the imaginative writings sitting on our shelves winner of the aldo and jeanne scaglione prize for comparative literary studies from the modern language association winner of the modern language association s aldo and jeanne scaglione prize for comparative literary studies the border between fact and fiction has been trespassed so often it seems to be a highway works of history that include fictional techniques are usually held in contempt but works of fiction that include history are among the greatest of classics fiction claims to be able to convey its own unique kinds of truth but unless a reader knows in advance whether a narrative is fictional or not judgment can be frustrated and confused in the distinction of fiction dorrit cohn argues that fiction does present specific clues to its fictionality and its own justifications indeed except in cases of deliberate deception fiction achieves its purposes best by exercising generic conventions that inform the reader that it is fiction cohn tests her conclusions against major narrative works including proust s a la recherche du temps perdu mann s death in venice tolstoy s war and peace and freud s case studies she contests widespread poststructuralist views that all narratives are fictional on the contrary she separates fiction and nonfiction as necessarily distinct even when bound together an expansion of cohn s christian gauss lectures at princeton and the product of many years of labor and thought the distinction of fiction builds on narratological and phenomenological theories to show that boundaries between fiction and history can be firmly and systematically explored this book is a critical study of the translation and adaptation of popular fiction into arabic at the turn of the twentieth century it examines the ways in which the egyptian nahda discourse with its emphasis on identity authenticity and renaissance suppressed various forms of cultural and literary creation emerging from the encounter with european genres as well as indigenous popular literary forms and languages the book explores the multiple and fluid translation practices of this period as a form of unauthorized translation that was not invested in upholding nationalist binaries of originality and imitation instead translators experimented with radical and complex forms of adaptation that turned these binaries upside down through a series of close readings of novels published in the periodical the people s entertainments the book explores the nineteenth century literary intellectual juridical and economic histories that are constituted through translation and outlines a comparative method of reading that pays particular attention to the circulation of genre across national borders
