a century ago only local charities existed to feed children today 368 million children receive school lunches in 151 countries in programs supported by state and national governments in feeding the future jennifer geist rutledge investigates how and why states have assumed responsibility for feeding children chronicling the origins and spread of school lunch programs around the world starting with the adoption of these programs in the united states and some western european nations and then tracing their growth through the efforts of the world food program the primary focus of feeding the future is on social policy formation how and why did school lunch programs emerge given that all countries developed education systems why do some countries have these programs and others do not rutledge draws on a wealth of information including archival resources interviews with national policymakers in several countries united nations data and agricultural statistics to underscore the ways in which a combination of ideological and material factors led to the creation of these enduringly popular policies she shows that in many ways these programs emerged largely as an unintended effect of agricultural policy that rewarded farmers for producing surpluses school lunches provided a ready outlet for this surplus she also describes how in each of the cases of school lunch creation policy entrepreneurs motivated by a commitment to alleviate childhood malnutrition harnessed different ideas that were relevant to their state or organization in order to funnel these agricultural surpluses into school lunch programs the public debate over how we feed our children is becoming more and more politically charged feeding the future provides vital background to these debates illuminating the history of food policies and the ways our food system is shaped by global social policy

during the 2000s the european union has witnessed a significant change in terms of integration policies for immigrants this book intends to address the relationship between on the one hand cultural diversity resulting from migration and on the other hand social cohesion and social justice within western societies in order to do this the authors examine what can be described as two contradictory trends in recent public policies towards foreign people or people with a foreign origin a book that aims to provide a trans disciplinary analysis of the construction of otherness in north america and europe extrait in october 2010 in a very polemic context on immigration and immigrant integration the german chancellor angela merkel announced that germany was to be considered a multicultural failure words that were soon echoed by the belgian prime minister yves leterme a few months later the british prime minister david cameron and the french president nicolas sarkozy announced the failure of multiculturalism in almost identical terms these sensational statements which by and large avoid defining the concept of multiculturalism are based on a reaffirmation of western values and strengthening of national identity these statements express the need to review the policies on integration of immigrants in the sense that they should be more active and voluntarist more organized by the state and more supported by the eu in the background one can see fear for islamic extremism but also the idea that the nation states can put some obligations on immigrants and that for a too long time we have been focusing on those who arrive rather than on the society that welcomes them these speeches are situated in a politico legal context that in recent years was characterized by an ambivalent attitude towards diversity in europe on the one hand we have seen accusations of racial ethnic and religious discrimination based on antidiscrimination legislation boosted by a strong european equality legal framework on the other hand we have seen denouncements of the perceived risk posed by islam in europe these policy statements are also a result of numerous publications often widely discussed in the media that outline the dangers of islam in europe especially in the netherlands these political positions have also led to political decisions demonstrating the lack of legitimacy of islam in europe such as the ban on building minarets in switzerland or the burqa bans adopted in the name of protecting national values and the living together notably in france and belgium 2011
