this volume the first in a new series by the national bureau of economic research that compares labor markets in different countries examines social and labor market policies in canada and the united states during the 1980s it shows that subtle differences in unemployment compensation unionization immigration policies and income maintenance programs have significantly affected economic outcomes in the two countries for example canada's social safety net more generous than the american one produced markedly lower poverty rates in the 1980s canada saw a smaller increase in earnings inequality than the united states did in part because of the strength of canadian unions which have twice the participation that u.s. unions do canada's unemployment figures were much higher than those in the united states not because the canadian economy failed to create jobs but because a higher percentage of nonworking time was reported as unemployment these disparities have become noteworthy as policy makers cite the experiences of the other country to support or

argues that there are fundamental social and economic similarities between the two groups but that taboos against intermarriage segregated schools and the nature of protestant and catholic religious beliefs keep the irish at loggerheads
