asean the association of southeast asian nations has made slow progress in defining a regional policy for the protection of migrant workers this book examines the normative structures within the institutions at play at both state and regional level of asean which influence the making of a migrant workers protection policy the author puts forward a novel alternative policy analysis tool the two level state and regional analysis that enables satisfactory explanation for policy making cases whereby normative institutional structures are involved and social policies are considered the author argues that the formulation of a working coherent migrant workers protection policy has not been achieved because of the presence of normative institutional structures with ideas unsupportive to the protection of migrant workers which results in a slow institutionalisation process although the migrant workers in question are their citizens and migrant sending countries are supposed to have more supportive normative structures for workers protection the author finds that when examined closely institutions in both migrant sending and receiving countries tend to have normative structures that are against workers protection these arguments drive the analytical questions of the book to inquire about the forms of the normative structures involved and their influence in the relevant institutions a unique contribution to the study of asean and migration in southeast asia this book will be of interest to academics in the field of social policy migration studies and asian studies in particular southeast asian studies

Germanic mythology is currently experiencing a significant boom in audiovisual media, especially among younger audiences. Heroes such as Thor, Odin, and Siegfried populate television and comic series, films, and video games. When and why did this interest in Germanic mythology emerge in the media, starting from the interpretation of the myths used by Richard Wagner in The Ring of the Nibelung at the end of the 19th century? The contributions in this volume examine the reception of Germanic myths in audiovisual media in the course of the 20th and 21st century.

Este libro busca entablar un diálogo entre diferentes investigadores que trabajan con pueblos originarios: Tikuna, Uitoto, y Muisca, y que desde sus objetivos particulares reflexionan acerca de las tensiones entre la naturaleza y el concepto de ambiente derivado de la modernidad. La naturaleza desde la perspectiva de dichos pueblos posee un carácter holístico: el ser humano es una extensión de ella; recibe y ofrece en una relación constante integrada y equilibrada. Por su parte, el ambiente es de carácter dual: la naturaleza y la cultura se separan, puesto que los seres humanos conocen, controlan y dominan la naturaleza a través del método científico y el desarrollo de la tecnología.

Discourse about water and power in the modern era have largely focused on human power over water: who gets to own and control a limited resource that has incredible economic potential? As a result, discussion of water, even in the humanities, has traditionally focused on fresh water for human use. Today, climate extremes, from drought to flooding, are forcing humanities scholars to reimagine water discourse. This volume exemplifies how interdisciplinary cultural approaches can transform water conversations. The manuscript is organized into three emergent themes in water studies: agency of water, fluid identities, and cultural currencies. The first section deals with the properties of water and the ways in which water challenges human plans for control. The second section explores how water, or lack of it, shapes human collective and individual identities the third engages notions of value and circulation to think about how water has been managed and employed for local national and international gains contributions come from preeminent as well as emerging voices across humanities fields including history art history philosophy and science and technology studies part of a bigger goal for shaping the environmental humanities the book broadens the concept of water to include not just water in oceans and rivers but also in pipes ice floes marshes bottles dams and more each piece shows how humanities scholarship has world changing potential to achieve more just water futures based on extensive archival research in peru spain and italy making medicines in early colonial lima peru examines how apothecaries in lima were trained ran their businesses traded medicinal products prepared medicines and found their place in society in the book newson argues that apothecaries had the potential to be innovators in science especially in the new world where they encountered new environments and diverse healing traditions however it shows that despite experimental tendencies among some apothecaries they generally adhered to traditional humoral practices and imported materia medica from spain rather than adopt native plants or exploit the region s rich mineral resources this adherence was not due to state regulation but reflected the entrenchment of humoral beliefs in popular thought and their promotion by the church and inquisition
