the social credit movement had a broad and significant impact on the social and political history of alberta a number of authors have examined this phenomenon usually focusing on the economic and social conditions that influenced social credit s rise to power major douglas and alberta social credit ideology however is the first work dedicated expressly to the intellectual history of the social credit government of the 1930s and 1940s bob hesketh challenges us to revise previous thinking about social credit by placing new emphasis on the influence of major c h douglas s conspiracy based ideology on the aberhart and manning governments the author is the first to contend that douglas s beliefs were strongly influenced by the infamous anti semitic book the protocols of the learned elders of zion douglas believed that a jewish financial conspiracy with the single goal of enslaving mankind was orchestrating world events hesketh analyses the shared ground between douglas s conspiratorial thinking and the fundamentalism of aberhart and manning he suggests that both premiers understood and applied douglas s teachings to a wide variety of government policies from the famous monetary bills to numerous lesser known economic diversification initiatives this book develops important new interpretations of social credit s behaviour as a movement party and government providing an unprecedented focus on ideology it will be an essential reference for historians and political scientists concerned with the history of social credit in alberta environmental history has traditionally told the story of man and nature scholars have too frequently overlooked the ways in which their predominantly male subjects have themselves been shaped by gender seeing nature through gender here reintroduces gender as a meaningful category of analysis for environmental history showing how women s actions desires and choices have shaped the world and seeing men as gendered actors as well in thirteen essays that show how gendered ideas have shaped the ways in which people have represented experienced and consumed their world virginia scharff and her coauthors explore interactions between gender and environment in history ranging from colonial borderlands to transnational boundaries from mountaintop to marketplace they focus on historical representations of humans and nature on questions about consumption on environmental politics and on the complex reciprocal relations among human bodies and changing landscapes they also challenge the ecofeminist position by challenging the notion that men and women are essentially different creatures with biologically different destinies each article shows how a person or group of people in history have understood nature in gendered terms and acted accordingly often with dire consequences for other people and organisms here are considerations of the ways we study sexuality among birds of william byrd s masking sexual encounters in his account of an eighteenth century expedition of how the ecology of fire in a changing built environment has reshaped firefighters own gendered identities some are playful as in a piece on the evolution of snow bunnies to shred bobbies others are dead serious as in a chilling portrait of how endocrine disrupters are reinventing humans animals and water systems from the cellular level out aiding and adding significantly to the enterprise of environmental history seeing nature through gender bridges gender history and environmental history in unexpected ways to show us how the natural world can remake the gendered patterns we've engraved on ourselves and on the planet
