this timely book takes seriously the idea of understanding how our social world and not individual responsibility or the healthcare system is the primary determinant of our health kathryn strother ratcliff puts into practice the upstream imagery from public health discourse which locates the causes and solutions of health problems within the social environment each chapter explains how the policies politics and power behind corporate and governmental decisions and actions produce unhealthy circumstances of living such as poverty pollution dangerous working conditions and unhealthy modes of food production and demonstrates that putting profit and politics over people is unhealthy and unsustainable while the book examines how these unhealthy conditions of life generate significant class and ethnic health disparities the focus is on everyone's health arguing that none of us should be placed in health threatening situations that could have been prevented ratcliff's provocative analysis uses social justice and human rights lenses to guide the discussion upstream toward possible changes that should produce a healthier world for us all using data and ideas from many disciplines the book provides a synthesis of invaluable information for activists and policymakers as well as for professionals and students in sociology public health and other fields related to health economic globalization and the acceptance of neoliberal governing ideology is shaping the health of Canadians. The COVID-19 epidemic vividly illustrated the importance of the social determinants of health as sickness and death rates were strikingly higher among Canadians in groups already experiencing adverse living and working conditions and poorer health. Lower income Canadians, recent immigrants of colour, and those experiencing housing and food insecurity. If anything positive is to come out of this experience, it will be recognition that in the current post-COVID-19 environment, it is essential to understand the socio-economic conditions that shape the health of individuals and communities. Social Determinants of Health, fourth edition, is aimed at courses focusing on the social determinants of health at Canadian universities and colleges, particularly those in health studies and nursing, but also allied health, sociology, and human services.

The purpose of this ground-breaking textbook is to describe and illustrate with pedagogical features the process by which social determinants of health (SDOH) has been integrated throughout all courses in the Nell Hodgson Woodruff School of Nursing. Specifically, the authors describe initial steps to develop a comprehensive SDOH model for nursing education, followed by rigorously designed faculty educational materials, exemplars of SDOH instructional materials, and evaluation of this process from faculty and students. It describes a comprehensive framework that guides the development, implementation, and evaluation of SDOH across the pre-licensure and post-licensure curriculum and illustrates the process of integrating SDOH throughout all aspects of didactic, simulation, and clinical education. Among the subjects addressed are the history of nursing and SDOH and the value of SDOH content in nursing courses to alleviate health disparities. Described and mandated are the integration of SDOH content into nursing curriculum by the leading nursing organizations. Summarized are the authors' review of existing SDOH frameworks used in public health and medicine and their presentation of a comprehensive SDOH model for nursing education. A SDOH educational course content for faculty is detailed in Social Determinants of Health 101, and exemplars from faculty and students are provided along with an evaluation after the first year. The authors conclude with a discussion from faculty leadership about what they learned and their suggestions to other nursing programs. Although there are books published, no books exist on this topic for nursing education and practicing nurses. Yet SDOH is foundational to nursing curriculum and practice. The leading nursing organizations are all mandating that SDOH be integrated into nursing courses. Hence, this textbook will be a key resource for schools of nursing in the US and globally. The intended audience of this book are leaders and faculty of nursing education programs, national professional nursing organizations, practicing nurses at hospitals and health systems, community and public health agencies, and ambulatory care.
