culture is central to what it is to be human to live in a social world yet twenty five years ago art and culture were re branded as creative industries valued for their economic contribution and set to launch the uk as the creative workshop of a new globalised world where does that leave art and culture now with lack of funding vision exhausted workers the value of culture is in the grip of accountancy firms creativity gurus and ted talkers at a time of sweeping geo political turmoil culture has been de politicized its radical energies reduced to factors of industrial production this book is about what happens when an essential part of our democratic citizenship fundamental to our human rights is reduced to an industry culture is not and industry argues art and culture need to renew their social contract and re align with this radical agenda for a more equitable future and offers a powerful vision for change today more than at any other point in history we are aware of the cultural impact of global processes this has created new possibilities for the development of a cosmopolitan culture but at the same time it has created new risks and anxieties linked to immigration and the accommodation of strangers this book examines how the images of the terrorist and the refugee by being dispersed across almost all aspects of social life have resulted in the production of ambient fears and it explores the role of artists in reclaiming the conditions of hospitality since 9 11 contemporary artists have confronted the issues of globalization by creating situations in which strangers can enter into dialogue with each other collaborating with diverse networks to forms new platforms for global knowledge such knowledge does not depend upon the old model of establishing a supposedly objective and therefore universal framework but on the capacity to recognize and mutually negotiate situated differences from artworks that incorporate new media techniques to collective activism papastergiadis claims that there is a new cosmopolitan imaginary that challenges the conventional divide between art and politics through the analysis of artistic practices across the globe this book extends the debates on culture and cosmopolitanism from the ethics of living with strangers to the aesthetics of imagining alternative visions of the world timely and wide ranging this book will be essential reading for students and scholars in sociology and cultural studies and will be of interest to anyone concerned with the changing forms of art and culture in our contemporary global age chinese art and its encounter with the world examines chinese art from the mid eighteenth century to the present beginning with discussion of a chinese portrait modeler from canton who traveled to london in 1769 and ending with an analysis of art and visual culture in post colonial hong kong by means of a series of six closely focused case studies often deliberately introducing non canonical or previously marginalized aspects of chinese visual culture it analyzes chinese art s encounter with the broader world and in particular with the west offering more than a simple charting of influences it uncovers a pattern of richly mutual interchange between chinese art and its others arguing that we cannot fully understand modern chinese art without taking this expanded global context into account it attempts to break down barriers between areas of art history which have hitherto largely been treated within separate and often nationally conceived frames aware that issues of cultural difference need to be addressed by art historians as much as by artists it represents a pioneering attempt to produce art historical writing which is truly global in approach david clarke is professor in the department of fine arts university of hong kong
