the arts of africa oceania and native america famously inspired twentieth century modernist artists such as picasso matisse and ernst the politics of such stimulus however have long been highly contentious was this a cross cultural discovery to be celebrated or just one more example of western colonial appropriation this revelatory book explores cross cultural art through the lens of settler societies such as australia and new zealand where europeans made new nations displacing and outnumbering but never eclipsing native peoples in this dynamic of dispossession and resistance visual art has loomed large settler artists and designers drew upon indigenous motifs and styles in their search for distinctive identities yet powerful indigenous art traditions have asserted the presence of first nations peoples and their claims to place history and sovereignty cultural exchange has been a two way process and an unpredictable one contemporary indigenous art draws on global contemporary practice but moves beyond a bland affirmation of hybrid identities to insist on the enduring values and attachment to place of indigenous peoples images of the tropics critically examines dutch colonial culture in the netherlands indies through the prism of landscape art susie protschky contends that visual representations of nature and landscape were core elements of how europeans understood the tropics justified their territorial claims in the region and understood their place both in imperial europe and in colonized asia during the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries her book thus makes a significant contribution to studies of empire art and environment as well as to histories of indonesia and europe surveying a rich visual culture developed over a period of some 350 years of dutch colonial engagement with indonesia susie protschky demonstrates how views of the archipelago s environment were far from simple topographical souvenirs rather this book reveals how images of the tropics visually articulated colonial attempts to legitimize and historicize what were in fact continually changing and contested claims to dutch territorial sovereignty in the indies further colonial images of nature were routinely inflected with diverse cultural preoccupations among them the constitution of gender class and racial boundaries in indies society the tenor of sexual mores in the tropics and the political role of religion in the archipelago landscape art thus indexed colonial views on a range of pressing social and political concerns probing jargon free and written with the pace of a detective story procter dissects western museum culture with such forensic fury that it might be difficult for the reader ever to view those institutions in the same way again financial times a smart accessible and brilliantly structured work that encourages readers to go beyond the grand architecture of cultural institutions and see the problematic colonial histories behind them sumaya kassim should museums be made to give back their marbles is it even possible to decolonize our galleries must rhodes fall how to deal with the colonial history of art in museums and monuments in the public realm is a thorny issue that we are only just beginning to address alice procter creator of the uncomfortable art tours provides a manual for deconstructing everything you thought you knew about art history and tells the stories that have been left out of the canon the book is divided into four chronological sections named after four different kinds of art space the palace the classroom the memorial and the playground each section tackles the fascinating enlightening and often shocking stories of a selection of art pieces including the propaganda painting the east india company used to justify its rule in india the tattooed maori skulls collected as art objects by europeans and works by contemporary artists who are taking on colonial history in their work and activism today the whole picture is a much needed provocation to look more critically at the accepted narratives about art and rethink and disrupt the way we interact with the museums and galleries that display it tourist art production is a global phenomenon and is increasingly recognized as an important and authentic expression of indigenous visual traditions these thoughtful engaging essays provide a comparative perspective on the history character and impact of tourist art in colonized societies in three areas of the world africa oceania and north america ranging broadly historically and geographically unpacking culture is the first collection to bring together substantial case studies on this topic from around the world taking as its departure point bernard smith s classic study european vision and the south pacific 1960 double vision explores the ambivalences of european perceptions of the pacific and juxtaposes them with the indigenous visual cultures that challenge western assumptions about art and representation double vision addresses these larger interpretive questions through case studies of the cultures of voyages colonial art and indigenous affirmations of identity it suggests that images and texts can be combined through a new practice of innovative visually oriented cultural history this approach yields a fresh understanding of history colonialism and culture in australia new zealand and the pacific double vision is a challenging combination of visual and textual inquiry and its outstanding list of
