combining political philosophy with a study of political behavior richard t longoria examines the contradictory nature of public opinion on policy issues he argues that public opinion is often characterized by dialetheial paradoxes when a statement and the contradiction of that statement are both held to be true for example a voter may express a desire for a balanced federal budget but also be against reducing entitlement programs increasing taxes or any other solution to achieve that goal longoria focuses on various social issues and domestic and foreign policies to explore these types of contradictory and incompatible preferences arguing that they stem from the pragmatic nature of americans worldview which prefers expediency over consistency these inconsistencies are typically called non attitudes but longoria suggests it would be better to call them bi attitudes when people have internalized the contradictions and believe in both ideas even when the two are incompatible they are being transconsistent rather than inconsistent transconsistency longoria concludes leads to perpetual dissatisfaction with the political system because the government often attempts to satisfy the incompatible preferences of a two faced public
