since the beginnings of the gatt and the bretton woods institutions and on to the creation of the wto states have continued to develop institutions and legal infrastructure to promote global interdependence international lawyers are experts in understanding how these institutions operate in practice but they tend to uncritically accept comparative advantage as the principal normative criterion to justify these institutions in contrast moral and political philosophers have developed accounts of global justice but these accounts have had relatively little influence on international legal scholarship and on institutional design this volume reflects the results of a symposium held at tillar house the american society of international law headquarters in washington dc in november 2008 which brought together philosophers legal scholars and economists to discuss the problems of understanding international economic law from the standpoints of rights and justice in particular from the standpoint of distributive justice or practitioners how might regional shortcomings in academic resources be addressed the final part of the book focuses on the state and future of international economic law practice in the brettton woods era including institutional reform the contributors consider issues such as what is the nature of international economic law practice what are the needs of practitioners in government private practice international and non governmental organisations finally how have the brettton woods institutions adapted to these and other challenges and how might they better respond in the future international economic law the state and future of the discipline will be of interest to lawyers economists and other professionals throughout the world whether in the private public academic or non governmental sectors seeking both fresh insights and expert assessments in this expanding field indeed the book itself promises to play a role in the next phase of the development of international economic law science and technology plays an increasingly important role in the continued development of international economic law this book brings together well known and rising scholars to explore the status and interaction of science technology and international economic law the book reviews the place of science and technology in the development of international economic law with a view to ensure a balance between the promotion of trade and investment liberalisation and decision making based on a sound scientific process without hampering technological development the book features chapters from a range of experts including lukasz gruszczynski jürgen kurtz andrew mitchell and peter k yu who examine a wide range of issues such as investment law international trade law and international intellectual property by bringing together these issues the book asks how international trade and investment regimes utilise science and technology and whether they do so fairly and in the interest of broader public policies this book will be of great interest to researchers of international economic law health law technology law and international intellectual property law
