this thoughtfully edited volume explores the operation of equality and discrimination law in times of crisis it aims to understand how existing inequalities are exacerbated in crises and whether equality law has the tools to understand and address this contingency experience during the covid 19 crisis shows that the pandemic has acted as a catalyst for exponential inequalities related to racism xenophobia sexism homophobia transphobia ageism and ableism yet the field of equality law which is meant to be addressing such discrimination or inequality has had little immediate relevance in mitigating these exponential inequalities this is despite the fact that countries like the uk have a rather recent and state of the art legislation in the field namely the equality act 2010 exponential inequalities offers readers an understanding of how these inequalities came to be and how crises such as the global pandemic the climate emergency or the economic downturn can exacerbate an already untenable situation it illuminates both the structural and the conceptual as well as the practical and doctrinal difficulties currently experienced in equality law and discusses whether or not equality law even has the tools to both understand and then address this contingency written by a team of internationally recognized experts exponential inequalities provides a comparative perspective on the functioning of equality laws across a range of contexts and jurisdictions and represents an essential read for scholars and policy makers alike both europe and the us have now dampened the shrillness of the invective hurled against each other over the last years but the underlying differences have not been resolved the two sides drift apart in their views on what internal politics should achieve as well as in their vision of the global order they would like to see established the economies of both europe and the us are highly developed and densely interwoven their societies are post industrial many social and economic trends converge similar too are the challenges to maintain security against threats emanating from other parts of the world divergences thus do not originate from conflicting material interests they arise from different perceptions of the nature and of threats from the outside world from how the two societies wish to define themselves through their internal and external policies the search for a distinct european or american identity fuels this discord therefore appeals to common merely material interests will not obliterate it the contributions to this book come from altogether twelve authors each of them addressing the issues from the perspective of his or her own discipline the book aims to reach not just academia but also beyond to those that are involved in actual international decision making
