governmental guidelines have forced a dramatic change in the practice of archaeological surveying in recent decades in response to public and private development surveying is needed to accurately inventory the cultural resources of a region and provide guidance for their preservation and management. Greg White and Tom King provide a handy introduction to students, field novices, and land managers on the strategies, methods, and logic of contemporary survey work. In addition to providing the legal and historical context for this endeavor, the book provides a heavily illustrated practical guide to conducting a survey to help beginners understand how it works. In practice, this volume is perfect for an archaeological methods class, field school, or reference collection.

The Soil Survey Manual, USDA Handbook No. 18, provides the major principles and practices needed for making and using soil surveys and for assembling and using related data. The term soil survey is used here to encompass the process of mapping, describing, classifying, and interpreting natural three-dimensional bodies of soil on the landscape. This work is performed by the National Cooperative Soil Survey in the United States and by other similar organizations worldwide. The manual provides guidance, methodology, and terminology for conducting a soil survey but does not necessarily convey policies and protocols required to administer soil survey operations. The soil bodies contain a sequence of identifiable horizons and layers that occur in repeating patterns in the landscape as a result of the factors of soil formation as described by Dokuchaev (1883) and Jenny (1941).

This is the purpose of this guidebook: to help organizations improve the development, implementation, and management of their transportation plans and programs by adding an element of performance measurement and monitoring to existing transportation planning processes. Agencies can obtain better information about the performance of their existing programs and services. Performance-based planning provides a process and tools to identify and assess alternative programs, projects, and services with respect to overall transportation plan goals and objectives. Ch 1 Overview p 3
