Lessons in creative labor solidarity and inclusion under precarious economic conditions as writers, musicians, online content creators, and other independent workers fight for better labor terms. Romance authors offer a powerful example and a cautionary tale about self-organization and mutual aid in the digital economy. In Love in the Time of Self-Publishing, Christine Larson traces the forty-year history of Romancelandia, a sprawling network of romance authors, readers, editors, and others who formed a unique community based on openness and collective support empowered by solidarity. American romance writers once disparaged as literary outcasts became digital publishing's most innovative and successful authors. Meanwhile, a new surge of social media activism called attention to Romancelandia's historic exclusion of romance authors of color and LGBTQ+ writers, forcing a long-overdue cultural reckoning. Drawing on the largest known survey of any literary genre as well as interviews and archival research, Larson shows how romance writers became the only authors in America to make money from the rise of ebooks, increasing their median income by 73 percent while other authors plunged by 40 percent. The success of romance writers, Larson argues, demonstrates the power of alternative forms of organizing influenced by gendered working patterns. It also shows how networks of relationships can amplify or mute certain voices. Romancelandia's experience, Larson says, offers crucial lessons about solidarity for creators and other isolated workers in an increasingly risky employment world. Romancelandia's rise and near meltdown shows that gaining fair treatment from platforms depends on creator solidarity, but creator solidarity in turn depends on fair treatment of all members.

As Jasinda Reed admits to a friend, she hasn't had a hot date since two years and twenty pounds ago. It's been a lot longer than that since she's trusted a man with good reason. She harbors no intentions of changing that any time soon. Jasinda hardly expects to meet Mr. Right while working behind the ice cream counter at Biggie Scoops one night when a handsome and charming stranger shows up at just the right time. Jasinda fears he and his attentive flirting may be too good to be true. Pro quarterback Craig Wilder goes after what he wants when he sees it at the top of his career. The popular football player is surrounded by fame, fortune, and his pick of any woman he wants. Well, almost any woman. The one he sets his sights on keeps pushing him away. Can the hot jock scale the wall that Jasinda put up to protect her heart? Jasinda panics when a scary incident puts her life in jeopardy. She wonders if someone is really out to get her or if she's letting the past haunt her present and possibly destroy her romantic future. Is someone out there focused on settling the score ready to teach Jasinda that revenge is a dish best served cold as ice cream?
