introductory the man who said that language was given to us to conceal our thoughts was a diplomat and a cynic admittedly diplomats politicians and propagandists find it expedient to put what they have to say in language which can be interpreted in different ways and there are occasions when most of us ordinary folk are glad to take advantage of the opportunity language gives us to disguise our true feelings or intentions but if this were the sole object of language or if we were to use it with this object habitually the confusion of babel would be worse confounded and ordinary human relations would soon be reduced to complete chaos until a more reliable form of oral and written communication was devised no the cynical diplomat i referred to just now was not really in earnest in fact he was only drawing attention to an accidental or accidental defect in an instrument which has been devised and urged by the labour of generations to enable people to understand one another language indeed is the best instrument for intelligible communication we possess it is not perfect by any means it has its defects and it has its drawbacks its drawbacks are naturally inherent in the spoken and written word we may not be able to remove them but we can do our best to neutralize them but its defects and shortcomings we can all help to remove we can each of us in our own humble way help to improve and perfect language with the object of making it a fuller clearer and more rational means of reaching mutual understanding this book has no pretension about it whatever it is neither a manual of rhetoric expatiating on the dogmas of style nor a grammar full of arbitrary rules and exceptions it is merely an effort to help ordinary everyday people to express themselves in ordinary everyday language in a proper manner some broad rules are laid down the observance of which will enable the reader to keep within the pale of propriety in oral and written language many idiomatic words and expressions peculiar to the language have been given besides which a number of the common mistakes and pitfalls have been placed before the reader so that he may know and avoid them many critics classify vladimir nabokov as a highbrow humourist a refined wordsmith overly fond of playful puzzles and private in jokes whose art appeals primarily to an intellectually sophisticated readership this study presents a more balanced portrait placing equal emphasis on the broader earthier humour that is such a marked feature of nabokov s writing which draws on the human body and all things physical for its laughs sex and scatology farce and slapstick moving between the metaphysical and the physical the cosmic and the comic mind and matter it presents nabokov as a writer at home in both high and low forms of humour a comedian who is capable of producing as many belly laughs as brainteasers and of appealing to a much wider readership than is commonly supposed originally published in 1980 this title began as a set of questions posed by faculty on the campus of carnegie mellon university what do we know about how people write what do we need to know to help people write better this resulted in an interdisciplinary symposium on cognitive processes in writing and subsequently this book which includes the papers from the symposium as well as further contributions from several of the attendees it presents a good picture of what research had shown about how people write of what people were trying to find out at the time and what needed to be done

how to speak and write correctly book has a beautiful glossy cover and a blank page for the dedication it is very easy to learn how to speak and write correctly as for all purposes of ordinary conversation and communication only about 2 000 different words are required the mastery of just twenty hundred words the knowing where to place them will make us not masters of the english language but masters of correct speaking and writing small number you will say compared with what is in the dictionary but nobody ever uses all the words in the dictionary or could use them did he live to be the age of methuselah and there is no necessity for using them in the preparation of this little work the writer has kept one end in view to make it serviceable for those for whom it is intended that is for those who have neither the time nor the opportunity the learning nor the inclination to peruse elaborate and abstruse treatises on rhetoric grammar and composition to them such works are as gold enclosed in chests of steel and locked beyond power of opening this book has no pretension about it whatever it is neither a manual of rhetoric expatiating on the dogmas of style nor a grammar full of arbitrary rules and exceptions it is merely an effort to help ordinary everyday people to express themselves in ordinary everyday language in a proper manner some broad rules are laid down the observance of which will enable the reader to keep within the pale of propriety in oral and written language many idiomatic words and expressions peculiar to the language have been given besides which a number of the common mistakes and pitfalls have been placed before the reader so that he may know and avoid them
