burnt by the sun examines the history of the first Korean diaspora in a western society during the highly tense geopolitical atmosphere of the Soviet Union in the late 1930s author Jon K. Chang demonstrates that the Koreans of the Russian Far East were continually viewed as a problematic and maligned nationality ethnic community during the Tsarist and Soviet periods he argues that Tsarist influences and the various forms of Russian nationalism's and worldviews blinded the Stalinist regime from seeing the Koreans as loyal Soviet citizens instead these influences portrayed them as a colonizing element labor force with unknown and unknowable political loyalties one of the major findings of Chang's research was the depth that the Soviet state was able to influence, penetrate and control the Koreans through not only state propaganda and media but also their selection and placement of Soviet Korean leaders, informants and secret police within the populace. From his interviews with relatives of former Korean OGPU/NKVD, the predecessor to the KGB officers, he learned of Korean NKVD who helped deport their own community. Given these facts, one would think the Koreans should have been considered a loyal Soviet people, but this was not the case, mainly due to how the Russian Empire and later the Soviet state linked political loyalty with race or ethnic community. During his six years of fieldwork in Central Asia and Russia, Chang interviewed approximately sixty elderly Koreans who lived in the Russian Far East prior to their deportation in 1937. This oral history, along with digital technology, allowed him to piece together Soviet Korean life as well as their experiences working with and living beside Siberian natives, Chinese, Russians, and the Central Asian peoples. Chang also discovered that some two thousand Soviet Koreans remained on North Sakhalin Island after the Korean deportation was carried out, working on Japanese-Soviet joint ventures extracting coal, gas, petroleum, timber, and other resources. This showed that Soviet socialism was not ideologically pure and was certainly swayed by Japanese capitalism and the monetary benefits of projects that paid the Stalinist regime hard currency for its resources.

In this innovative and persuasive volume, Sonia Ryang offers new ways to think about North Korea and how truth emerges over decades from within a dominant discourse. It explores four discrete yet mutually related domains of discourse: North Korea's literary purge of the 1950s, 1960s; its state-initiated linguistic reforms of the 1960s, 1980s; stories from a people's chronicle, more than one hundred volumes in length, documenting interactions with the Great Leader Kim Il Sung and the multivolume memoirs of the Great Leader himself published in the 1990s. These texts are heterogeneous in terms of authorship, style, purpose, and genre, and many have never before been explored in Anglophone studies of North Korea. All have contributed to consolidating a North Korean regime of truth, bringing into existence a set of assumptions and shared understandings that have been regarded as true over the last half century. Basing her work on a study of these linguistic and discursive domains, Ryang explores the ways in which power, truth, and self are indissolubly connected by function as well as efficacy, and how language plays a key role in sustaining their validity. The Kim Il Sung era from 1945 to Kim's death in 1994 forms the basis of the book, but the way truth emerged and was sustained during these decades provide important insight into how we can comprehend north korea today rather than view the country as an ideological entity in order to expose its falsehood so to speak thinking critically about what it sees as true yields a far more productive outcome for scholarly analysis as well as general understanding language and truth in north korea will find a ready audience among those interested in north korea from a wide variety of disciplines including the social sciences history philosophy and theology the two korean states are heirs to a great artistic and cultural tradition moreover they share a long sometimes bitter historical experience culminating in forty years of japanese colonial rule although liberated in 1945 korea was divided two states emerged a communist north and an autocratic south in 1950 the north failed in an attempt at reunification by force and the resultant korean war intensified the hostility which continues to this day since the end of the war south korea has become one of the world s economic success stories north korea has been less successful but attracts interest for its unique development as a marxist state
