on january 25 1996 the committee on youth development of the board on children youth and families convened a workshop to examine the implications of research on social settings for the design and evaluation of programs that serve youth the january workshop provided an opportunity for the committee to examine the strengths and limitations of existing research on interactions between social settings and adolescent development this research has drawn attention to the importance of understanding how and where adolescents interact with their families peers and unrelated adults in settings such as home school places of work and recreational sites this workshop builds on previous work of the national research council and reiterates its support for integrating studies of social settings into more traditional research on individual characteristics family functioning and peer relationships in seeking to describe and explain adolescent behavior and youth outcomes not only does this report examine the strengths and limitations of research on social settings and adolescence and identify important research questions that deserve further study in developing this field but it also explores alternative methods by which the findings of research on social settings could be better integrated into the development of youth programs and services specific themes include the impact of social settings on differences in developmental pathways role expectations and youth identity and decision making skills as well as factors that contribute to variations in community context perhaps no other challenge is more pressing in creating developmentally tentative community and society the theme of this book series than mobilizing adults to play active constructive roles in the lives of children and adolescents in a society that too easily defaults to designing programs as cure alls for meeting young people's needs particular attention must be paid to understanding and mobilizing the kind of positive relational energy that prepares each successive generation to assume its place in society although programs and institutions certainly play important roles the key lies in the personal commitment involvement and investment of adults in young people's lives in mobilizing adults for positive youth development strategies for closing the gap between beliefs and behaviors e gil clary and jean e rhodes have assembled the insights of leading scholars from multiple disciplines and contexts for engaging a broad cadre of adults as allies for youth development as the editors write the question guiding the book is how can we most effectively encourage adults both individually and collectively to begin to behave differently with respect to the young people of a community to do so consistently and to do so in a variety of ways what is being proposed then is nothing less than a social movement that engages individuals small groups neighborhoods workplaces schools faith communities and broader social institutions in attending to the well being and healthy development of young people
