porosity between politics and the economy addresses the relationships between politics and the economy in deeply original ways it is a book motivated by a sense of urgency aroused by both the failure of modern capitalism and the environmental crisis egidius berns argues that the relations between politics and the economy are porous and he investigates the consequences of this porosity by mapping out of a number of conceptual fault lines that underpin the weaknesses of post industrial capitalist societies berns provides a fresh look at the current crisis of open societies but the book also preliminarily points to a path to reforming the relations between the economy and politics by analyzing the web of conceptual connections that will continue to inform any possible configuration between them it finds a way into a future characterized by a certain ethics that combines restraint and combativeness this book traces a dialectic relationship between politics and antipolitics the first as used here being akin to philosophy as an activity of open inquiry plural democracy and truth finding and the latter in the realm of ideology technocracy and presupposed certainties it returns back to the emergence of a new left movement in the 1960s in order to follow the history of this relationship since then it addresses contemporary debates by looking to the fall of the berlin wall and the soviet bloc and asking in the wake of that what is a revolution finally it draws on these analyses to examine the age of terrorism after the tragedy of september 11 2001 and resounds with a call to pursue democracy and real politics in the face of new forms of antipolitics the politics of empowerment of banyarwanda refugees in uganda 1959 2001 introduces empowerment discourse to the nexus between politics security and forced migration and refugees conceptualized as a group process where people who lack their share of valued resources strive to gain greater access to and control over those resources empowerment of banyarwanda refugees was possible through a protracted struggle the book explores how the banyarwanda refugees achieved reasonable levels of integration in ugandan society because of similar demographics social economic and cultural characteristics with the ugandan population in the areas they settled had the ugandan state not broken down in the late 1970s and 1980s these refugees would have perhaps acquired naturalization a veritable form of empowerment in contrast although most hutu and tutsi refugees achieved meaningful levels of integration as some were treated badly and abused with derogatory language their leaders and some of the elites never gave up the dream of returning home the book concludes that violent conflicts emerge because of a violation of human rights and denial of access to scarce resources and rwanda and africa as a whole must build institutions that allow popular participation in decision making transfer of political power from one group or generation to the other and generally to address the question of democracy and good governance
