why do so many doctors have profound misgivings about the push to legalise euthanasia and assisted suicide ole hartling uses his background as a physician university professor and former chairman of the danish council of ethics to introduce new elements into what can often be understood as an all too simple debate alive to the case that assisted dying can be driven by an unattainable yearning for control hartling concentrates on two fundamental questions whether the answer to suffering is to remove the sufferer and whether self determination in dying and death is an illusion he draws on his own experience as a medical doctor to personalize the ethical arguments share patients narratives and make references to medical literature here is a sceptical stance towards euthanasia one that is respectful to those who hold different opinions and well informed about the details and nuances of different euthanasia practices written from a scandinavian perspective where respect for autonomy and high quality palliative care go hand in hand hartling s is a nuanced valuable contribution to the arguments that surround a question doctors have faced since the birth of medicine he shows us how the intentions of doing something good can sometimes lead to even greater dilemmas opening us up to those situations where an inclination to end suffering by ending life is deeply conflicting both for the clinician and for any fellow human being

this book is the first comprehensive report and analysis of the dutch euthanasia experience over the last three decades in contrast to most books about euthanasia which are written by authors from countries where the practice is illegal and therefore practised only secretly this book analyzes empirical data and real life clinical behavior its essays were written by the leading dutch scholars and clinicians who shaped euthanasia policy and who have studied evaluated and helped regulate it some of them have themselves practised euthanasia the book will contribute to the world literature on physician assisted death by providing a comprehensive examination of how euthanasia has been practised and how it has evolved in one specific national and cultural context it will greatly advance the understanding of euthanasia among both advocates and opponents of the practice the majority of doctors and nurses involved in specialist palliative care reject the legalisation of physician assisted suicide pas this book explores the reasons why the healthcare professionals who have the most experience of caring for dying patients should object to a change in the law debate about euthanasia and pas often arises in response to a well publicised tragic case of unrelieved suffering such heart rending stories do not reflect the fact that the majority of people dying have a dignified death there is a marked disparity between medical intuitions and the philosophers arguments about euthanasia and pas it seems that part of the moral constitution of a doctor is a commitment not to intend the death of a patient and to protect them from harm the perspective of those who are privileged to care for thousands of dying patients and their families should inform the debate about pas this book will enable those who are not working within palliative care to gain an insight into the scope of this speciality and to understand why legalisation of pas should be resisted to maintain and improve care of dying patients
