this book provides a comprehensive accessible guide to social science methodology in so doing it establishes methodology as distinct from both methods and philosophy most existing textbooks deal with methods or sound ways of collecting and analysing data to generate findings in contrast this innovative book shows how an understanding of methodology allows us to design research so that findings can be used to answer interesting research questions and to build and test theories most important things in social research e.g. beliefs, institutions, interests, practices and social classes cannot be observed directly. This book explains how empirical research can nevertheless be designed to make sound inferences about their nature, effects and significance. The authors examine what counts as good description, explanation and interpretation and how they can be achieved by striking intelligent trade-offs between competing design virtues. Coverage includes why methodology matters, what philosophical arguments show us about inference, competing virtues of good research design, purposes of theory, models and frameworks, forming researchable concepts and typologies, explaining and interpreting, inferring causation, meaning and significance and combining explanation and interpretation. The book is essential reading for new researchers faced with the practical challenge of designing research. Extensive examples and exercises are provided based on the authors' long experience of teaching methodology to multi-disciplinary groups. Perri 6 is professor of social policy in the graduate school in the college of business law and social sciences at Nottingham Trent University. Chris Bellamy is emeritus professor of public administration in the graduate school Nottingham Trent University.

Methodology is the field which is indisputably complex in the academic world. It is often said to be important yet in everyday academic practice it is not always treated accordingly. In teaching methodology is often a mandatory course. Usually it consists of learning how to adopt several common approaches when doing research and how to conceive a research design, often leading to a survey. This usually leads to collecting data on a modest scale and when the opportunity arises analysing the data with the help of some statistics. Ask the students of their opinion at the end of such a course and they tend to heave a deep sigh of relief and say 'I have got through it'. Then their real courses start again in which methodology often does not play a role at all. We are of the opinion that writing off methodology in this way is a real pity. It ignores the valuable role that methodology should play in academic teaching. As a whole here methodology is presented as a form of thinking and acting that while obviously entailing research work can also include the design and change of organisations. This broad approach has been purposefully chosen as it is almost obvious from research and graduation projects that the students do not really have a clue what methodology involves and therefore wasting their time by producing work that has a little quality.
