seminar paper from the year 2004 in the subject politics topic european union grade english 6 5 out of 10 maastricht university language english abstract europe is coming closer together this is shown in many parts of daily life it is often argued that money is one of the best known and most effective tools in symbolising the united europe the eu most of the member states of the european union who matched the criteria of the growth and stability pact seem to have agreed to this and joined the economic and monetary union emu as soon as it was introduced but why were there some who decided not to exchange their national currency in favour for the common european one did they not feel an affinity with other europeans did they not see that all europeans are part of a community which is trying to express its unity through a common currency or did they not view the euro ideologically but rationally and if they did what does this tell us about their european identity in short is it necessary to join the economic and monetary union to be a european this article tries to answer these questions by looking for reasons why denmark the united kingdom and sweden decided not to accept the euro in particular looking for similarities and their relation to the development of a single european identity in a community of europeans a thoughtful observer of the ongoing project of european integration evaluates the state of the art about european identity and european public spheres thomas risse argues that integration has had profound and long term effects on the citizens of eu countries most of whom now have at least a secondary european identity to complement their national identities risse also claims that we can see the gradual emergence of transnational european communities of communication exploring the outlines of this european identity and of the communicative spaces risse sheds light on some pressing questions what do europe and the eu mean in the various public debates how do european identities and transnational public spheres affect policymaking in the eu and how do they matter in discussions about enlargement particularly turkish accession to the eu what will be the consequences of the growing contestation and politicization of european affairs for european democracy this focus on identity allows risse to address the democratic deficit of the eu the disparity between the level of decision making over increasingly relevant issues for peoples lives at the eu and the level where politics plays itself out in the member states he argues that the eu s democratic deficit can only be tackled through politicization and that debating europe might prove the only way to defend modern and cosmopolitan europe against the increasingly forceful voices of euroskepticism in today s european politics european integration and further enlargements of the european union eu are two of the most salient issues on the political agenda public opinion is becoming increasingly decisive for eu policy making and it is crucial to identify the factors that shape european identity and public opinion about the integration process in order to understand and predict the dynamics of european integration i argue a european identity that indicates support for the eu is a civic or political identity that reflects economic and political values and principles promoted by eu institutions employing survey data from the 2005 2006 world values survey for 17 european countries i evaluate the effects of utilitarian and national identity factors on european identity the results of the multiple multi level linear regression analysis indicate that economic and political factors on both the macro and micro level shape european identity and support for european integration
