a singular development of the post cold war era is the use of military force to protect human beings from rwanda to kosovo sierra leone to east timor soldiers have rescued civilians in some of the world's most notorious war zones drawing on two decades of research thomas g weiss provides a compelling introduction to the theory and practice of humanitarian intervention in the modern world he examines political ethical legal strategic economic and operational dimensions and uses a wide range of cases to highlight key debates and controversies this succinct and highly accessible survey is neither celebratory nor complacent the author locates the normative evolution of what is increasingly known as the responsibility to protect in the context of the war on terror and the 2005 un world summit the result is an engaging exploration of the current dilemmas and future challenges for international humanitarian action in the 21st century

international law makes it explicit that states shall not intervene militarily or otherwise in the affairs of other states it is a central principle of the charter of the united nations but international law also provides an exception when a conflict within a state poses a threat to international peace military intervention by the un may be warranted indeed the un charter provides for an international police force though nothing has ever come of this provision the charter and other un documents also assert that human rights are to be protected but in the past the responsibility for the protection of human rights has for the most part been allowed to rest on the government of the state where the violation of rights occurs not surprisingly in this context the question of what protection if any should be provided by the un or otherwise to individuals when their human rights are violated by their governments or with the complicity of their governments remains a contentious issue should the principle of respect for state sovereignty trump the principle of respect for human rights historically it has been allowed to do so but recently it has been more and more widely argued that when states fail to respect the human rights of their citizens or of others who reside within their boundaries they may be held accountable for their actions is military humanitarian intervention justifiable and if so under what circumstances those are the questions addressed in this collection of essays the focus of the volume is on the abstract principles involved though reference is sometimes made to specific cases the essays here consist primarily of philosophical reflection on the abstract issues a companion volume on the specific issues surrounding a particular case lessons of kosovo is being published simultaneously should states use military force for humanitarian purposes what are the challenges to international society posed by humanitarian intervention in a post september 11th world this path breaking work brings together well known scholars of law philosophy and international relations together with practitioners who have been actively engaged in intervention during the past decade together this team provides practical and theoretical answers to one of the most burning issues of our day case studies include somalia rwanda the balkans and east timor as well as the recent us intervention in afghanistan the book demonstrates why humanitarian intervention continues to be a controversial issue not only for the united nations but also for western states and humanitarian organizations

a singular development of the post cold war era is the use of military force to protect human beings from rwanda to kosovo sierra leone to east timor soldiers have rescued civilians in some of the world s most notorious war zones drawing on two decades of research thomas g weiss provides a compelling introduction to the theory and practice of humanitarian intervention in the modern world he examines political ethical legal strategic economic and operational dimensions and uses a wide range of cases to highlight key debates and controversies this succinct and highly accessible survey is neither celebratory nor complacent the author locates the normative evolution of what is increasingly known as the responsibility to protect in the context of the war on terror and the 2005 un world summit the result is an engaging exploration of the current dilemmas and future challenges for international humanitarian action in the 21st century provided by publisher focusing on case studies such as the international fight against the slave trade 1807 1890 the military interventions of the major european powers on humanitarian emergency aid for christian minorities in the ottoman empire 1827 1878 and the intervention of the united states in the cuban war of independence 1898 the book investigates the emergence of the military practice and related legal debates on the protection of humanitarian norms by violent means the central result of the book is that the idea of humanitarian intervention established itself as a recognized instrument in international politics during this period in this respect the international fight against the slave trade became the primal type of this new practice and played a key role in the emergence of a new understanding of humanitarian interventionism as a result guidelines under international law were developed which served as justification for military intervention in various crisis regions of the world thus the long 19th century can be indeed described as the genuine century of humanitarian intervention in which military interventionism under the banner of humanity was significantly intertwined with colonial and imperial projects since the end of the cold war humanitarian interventions have continued to evolve and respond to a wide range of political crises these insightful essays focus on the challenges associated with interventions when facing conflict and human rights violations unmitigated systematic violence state re building human mobility and dislocation each chapter is linked to the rest through three defining themes that permeate the book the evolution of humanitarian interventions in a global era the limits of sovereignty and the ethics of interventions and the politics of post intervention re building and humanitarian engagement the authors incorporate a variety of case studies including kosovo timor leste syria libya and iraq and examine the complexity of interventions across their different dimensions including relevant doctrines such as r2p use of force and human security since the nato military intervention in kosovo in 1999 the issue of whether and when it is acceptable for states to intervene forcefully to halt human rights violations in another state has become one of the most contentious subjects in managing contemporary international relations with chapters on china india japan south korea and member states of the association of southeast asian nations asean by scholars from those countries this book presents a comparative analysis of asian views on humanitarian intervention these views reflect five interrelated factors shared to varying degrees by asian countries historical experience status as developing countries status as small or weak states problems with the west and the concept of the asian way contributors to this volume analyze these factors in an attempt to identify areas of consensus and divergence with a view to setting forth practical policy recommendations contributors include jia qingguo school of international studies peking university jasjit singh institute of defense studies and analysis india murata koji department of politics doshisha university japan kim sung han institute of foreign affairs and national security ministry of foreign affairs and trade korea rizal sukma centre for strategic and international studies indonesia and simon s c tay singapore institute of international affairs

and military interventionism in the post cold war global world it considers the present climate of global media and communications the increasing international awareness of humanitarian emergencies and the human rights agenda and the increasingly complex national and strategic interests of the interventionists the study is particularly concerned with interventionism in africa providing a detailed account and analysis of the troubled experience of somalia to draw wider conclusions for the continent issues of state sovereignty and international law the roles of civil society of individual countries regional organisations such as the african union and the broader united nations system it also covers the experiences of military interventions in iraq in 1991 kosovo and east timor and outlines some general policy recommendations and guidelines for humanitarian interventions essay from the year 2011 in the subject communications media and politics politic communications grade 1 1 language english abstract in looking at the reasons behind detrimental effects of humanitarian aid i attempt to explore the following question how does the media affect the success of humanitarian aid intervention efforts in large scale political violence i hypothesize that high levels of media coverage of such situations will lead to decreased effectiveness of humanitarian intervention much important information is lost and extraneous information is added throughout the life and travels of a news story this in turn leads to faulty public opinion and thus unsound demands and views on humanitarian action depending on the influence of actors self interest s this negative relationship may be magnified however my hypothetical relationship does not depend on such political interests the cases i have chosen to test this hypothesis are kosovo and tajikistan i chose these cases for multiple reasons first they are both internal violent conflicts since both of these conflicts occurred in areas close to developed countries in western europe these cases should be relatively equal in terms of opportunities for foreign interest in intervention both instances of violence in kosovo and tajikistan involve political conflict in which foreign humanitarian intervention was implemented all cases illustrated high levels of civil violence between different political and ethnic groups with at least 15 000 deaths interventions all took place during the 1990s so media communications can be evaluated from a similar technological standpoint the first interventions in kosovo took place in 1999 and tajikistan in 1992 international intervention on humanitarian grounds has been a contentious issue for decades this volume undertakes a systematic and broadly international review of issues relating to this subject when can a state give political support to a military intervention in another state the government of the netherlands commissioned an international expert group composed of eminent members from the fields of international law international relations and diplomacy the expert group s objective was to examine this complex topical and time sensitive question and to consider whether the government should press for international acceptance of humanitarian intervention as a new legal basis for the use of force between states in exceptional circumstances this volume is the result of those efforts the expert group was led by professor cyrille fijnaut and consisted of mr kristian fischer professor terry gill professor larissa van den herik professor martti koskenniemi professor claus kreß mr robert serry ms monika sie dhian ho ms elizabeth wilmshurst and professor rob de wijk their thorough analysis and recommendations offer important insights that can aid governments in formulating a position on political support for the use of force between states and humanitarian intervention the volume also constitutes a useful tool for scholars and practitioners in considering these difficult and important issues from the foreword by stef blok minister of foreign affairs of the netherlands the expert group s thorough analysis and recommendations on this complex subject offer important insights that can aid the government in formulating its position on political support for the use of force between states and humanitarian intervention in drawing up this advisory report the expert group has helped the government develop a new contemporary vision on these issues the question of humanitarian intervention's legality remains unanswered to date this book offers a new approach to the legality issue by combining legal theory and international law with humanitarian intervention hard choices still have to be made by the international lawgiver this brief sheds light on the motivation of humanitarian intervention from a theoretical and empirical point of view an in depth analysis of the theoretical arguments surrounding the issue of a legitimate motivation for humanitarian intervention demonstrate to what extent either altruism or national self interests are considered a righteous stimulus the question about what constitutes a just intervention has been at the core of debates in just war theory for centuries in particular in regards to humanitarian intervention it is oftentimes difficult to define the criteria for a righteous intervention more than in conventional military interventions the motivation and intention behind humanitarian intervention is a crucial factor whether the humanitarian intervention cases of the post cold war era were driven by altruistic or by self interested considerations is a question is covered within and enables a comprehensive and holistic evaluation of the question of what motivates western democracies to intervene or to abstain from intervention in humanitarian crises philosophers fernando tesón and bas van der vossen offer contrasting views of humanitarian intervention as a war aimed at ending tyranny or as unjustifiable violence fernando tesón argues that humanitarian interventions are sometimes permissible bas van der vossen argues that as a rule they are not the authors use the tools of modern analytic philosophy in particular just war theory to substantiate their claims this book places humanitarian intervention in a long term historical context reconsidering the doctrine's place in international society as well as the principles on which this society is based tonny brems knudsen provides case studies on iraq somalia bosnia herzegovina rwanda kosovo and afghanistan examining the following issues the legal and political status of humanitarian intervention in what ways the rights of humanitarian intervention constitute a threat to the bases of international order and how this affects the position of an individual in international society the extent to which humanitarian intervention questions the conventional assumption that international solidarity and the pursuit of human justice are fundamentally at odds with the normative foundation of modern international society humanitarian intervention will be of great interest to students of politics international relations and human rights master s thesis from the year 2014 in the subject law european and international law intellectual properties grade distinction university of hertfordshire faculty of law course international law language english abstract in this thesis the concepts of sovereignty non intervention and humanitarian intervention will gradually be unveiled especially in subsequent chapters the cases of syria and libya will serve as watershed for the theoretically unveiled concepts the principle of state sovereignty plays a great role in the formation of international law as it sets a basic foundation on which the international society is built the natural supposition is that international order is best maintained if states respect one another s sovereignty by adhering to the norms of non intervention in the internal affairs of other states the modern idea of sovereignty dates back to ancient rome in which all sovereign powers were bestowed on the emperor it was deemed an absolute unified inalienable power based upon a voluntary but irrevocable contract humanitarian interventions that sounds nice much nicer than wars battles and use of military force foremost the phrase makes you think of the delivery of sanitary goods medication of soup kitchens here we are not supposed to think of interventions of this kind we have to have humanitarian interventions in mind which are humanitarian intervention wars i at exactly what point is the use of military force a humanitarian intervention what is the humanitarian aspect of those interventions their occasion their motive their alleged as well as their actual consequences ii at exactly what point are humanitarian intervention wars morally justifiable are they justifiable even if they are wars of aggression breaching international law and finally iii was the war which was presented to us as the paradigmatic example of a humanitarian intervention war that is the war in kosovo in the spring of 1999 with over 37 000 bombing missions really justifiable as a humanitarian intervention many of us wanted to believe so at the time does our ex ante judgement hold today in an ex post reflection and which lessons for the future should we learn from the success or failure of this humanitarian war these are the questions proposed in this book therefore it is concerned with problems of semantics part i problems of moral assessment part ii and with the moral legal and political conclusions we draw from our experiences with the war in kosovo our primary example of a humanitarian intervention part iii international experts in the areas of philosophy international law sociology and peace studies debated these questions vigorously for several days this is the resulting volume
