Despite the impact local school board members have on public education, little has been written about them and the experiences and motivations they bring to the board table. Particularly from a board member's perspective, Report Card: The Weekly Education of an American School Board Member fills that void. Authored by James Patrick Hussey, it includes 100 essays ranging from surprisingly interesting treatises on budgets and bond levies to impassioned articles underscoring the role of public education in a free society. Each essay serves as a catalyst for classroom discussions or independent writing assignments that engage students intellectually and often emotionally in the topic it explores. Hussey uses his extensive experiences in education and journalism to create a work that is intellectually rigorous but accessible to a wide audience. Unlike some books exploring public policy, Report Card rarely shouts at its readers instead hussey writes with the humility of someone required to live in his community after the newspaper columns from which these essays are adapted were published it will be of special interest to persons with current or anticipated roles in america s public schools particularly administrators teachers education students and elected officials this book will also make an excellent supplemental text for teacher preparation or educational leadership classes from introductory courses to doctoral seminars the most successful educators know that there are two components to teaching the academic side and the human side contrary to what most people think the human aspect of teaching is by far the most difficult to achieve teachers are expected to relate to and educate a wide range of personalities levels of maturity and emotions it is very difficult perhaps even impossible to achieve the potential that lies within both the teacher and the student without caring all teaching methods techniques and motivations are a waste of time without the human component by incorporating the human element teachers find the solution to classroom tensions in creating an atmosphere of caring and sharing the teacher allows the relationship between student and teacher to become loving rather than adversarial
