in the context of the end of the cold war and the spread of globalism sub regions are attracting attention as new social units of international society never before observed in the second wave of regionalism that became active in the 1980s a new regionalism which differed qualitatively from the old regionalism expanded globally this new regionalism is characterized by multi dimensionality complexity fluidity and non conformity and within it we cannot overlook the fact that spaces on a new scale such as sub regions are being formed in various parts of the world the sovereign state system that has continued unbroken since the westphalia treaty is being transformed and within this context the increase in the number of sub regions as new social units adds to the sense that we have arrived at a post westphalian international order this book focuses on sub region as a new social unit of international society it is based on the findings obtained through meticulous fieldwork and joint studies conducted over the past 10 years by about 20 researchers primarily from japanese universities and chiang mai university thailand the sub regions described here are mostly international cross border spaces or units in the interior of a certain region which include multiple states states and parts of states or more than two parts of states often referred to as micro regions such sub regions have been formed in various parts of the world since the end of the cold war however studies on sub regions remain unexplored in the existing studies of regionalism the few studies that do exist mainly focus on the economic aspects of sub regions in contrast this book will specifically examine the sub regions in asia especially the mekong region and europe as main cases from a political science and international relations perspective aiming to establish a new alternative international relations by carving out a political angle of sub region as a new social unit of international society and attempting to shift the paradigm of conventional international relations to understand the political dimension of a sub region this book will mainly focus on three aspects sub regions and state strategies bottom up dimension of sub regions and sub regions and borders pertain to theoretical aspects of international relations such as growth nature and scope of international relations the functioning of the state system national power national interest balance of power approaches to international relations determinants and types of foreign policy etc the subsequent eighteen chapters deal with practical international relations and policies that were maintained played at international level from 1945 to this day the topics analyzed are cold war détente new cold war asian african resurgence non alignment third world north south dialogue new international economic order the impact of nuclear weapons disarmament and arms control changed world scenario and new pattern of international relations more than 55 years of india s foreign policy has been condensed into a separate chapter for the convenience of the readers the revised edition is full of freshness and newness as it updates all important facets of contemporary international relations this book will be very useful for students and teachers of international relations political science history diplomacy and international organization it will be equally helpful to the candidates preparing for various competitive exams such as ias ips and central services
