In America in Jerusalem, the authors examine the effects of globalization and Americanization on the national identity of small nations using Israel as a case study. First, Avraham analyzed the changes in Israeli advertising over the past two decades. They found that since the 90s, Israeli advertisers began using American symbols, values, sights, and heroes to promote diverse products without any consideration of the place they were actually made. The perspective offered in this book is a consideration of advertising as a locus of the tension between national identity and globalization. Americanization is an innovative one, generating a model that can be used to analyze national identity through advertising in the age of globalization. Americanization. Although many books have focused on numerous aspects of Israeli society, America in Jerusalem offers a new and accessible perspective on the changes in Israeli identity.
