at the origins of the major religious traditions one typically finds a seminal figure names such as jesus muhammad confucius and moses are well known yet their status as founders has not gone uncontested does paul deserve the credit for founding christianity is laozi the father of daoism or should that title belong to zhuangzi what is at stake if anything in debates about the historical buddha what assumptions are implicit in the claim that hinduism is a religion without a founder the essays in varieties of religious invention do not attempt to settle these perennial arguments rather they consider the subtexts of such debates as an exercise in comparative religion who engages in them to whom do they matter and when to what extent are origins thought to define the essence of a religion when is development in a religious tradition perceived as deviation from its roots in what ways do arguments about founders serve as proxies for broader cultural theological political or ideological questions what do they reveal about the ways in which the past is remembered and authority negotiated surveying the landscape shaped by these questions within each tradition the authors provide insights and novel perspectives about the individual religions and about the study of world religions more generally what do a north indian prince a chinese teacher and a carpenter s son from the roman province of galilee and an arabian merchant have in common the buddha confucius jesus and muhammad each founded a system of thought which in its own way has shaped the lives and thinking of countless generations across the world what are the distinctive features of these four great traditions why have they had such a profound and lasting influence on the way people think today readers of these four lucid and authoritative accounts will gain new insight into the different ways in
