Europe is today the only region in the world where the death penalty has been almost completely abolished in the Council of Europe's 45 member states including the European Union's 15 member states and its 13 candidate countries capital punishment is no longer applied the Council of Europe believes that the death penalty has no place in democratic societies under any circumstances this book reviews the long and sometimes tortuous path to abolition in Europe it also addresses the tangible problems which countries face once the death penalty has been abolished and related issues the situation of murder victims families and alternatives to capital punishment particularly the choice of a substitute sentence it also discusses abolition campaigns in Russia the United States and Japan

The fifth edition of this highly praised study charts and explains the progress that continues to be made towards the goal of worldwide abolition of the death penalty the majority of nations have now abolished the death penalty and the number of executions has dropped in almost all countries where abolition has not yet taken place emphasising the impact of international human rights principles and evidence of abuse the authors examine how this has fuelled challenges to the death penalty and they analyse and appraise the likely obstacles political and cultural to further abolition they discuss the cruel realities of the death penalty and the failure of international standards always to ensure fair trials and to avoid arbitrariness discrimination and conviction of the innocent all violations of the right to life they provide further evidence of the lack of a general deterrent effect shed new light on the influence and limits of public opinion and argue that substituting for the death penalty life imprisonment without parole raises many similar human rights concerns this edition provides a strong intellectual and evidential basis for regarding capital punishment as undeniably cruel inhuman and degrading widely relied upon and fully updated to reflect the current state of affairs worldwide this is an invaluable resource for all those who study the death penalty and work towards its removal as an international goal from 1965 until 1980 there was a virtual moratorium on executions for capital offenses in the united states this was due primarily to protracted legal proceedings challenging the death penalty on constitutional grounds after much sturm und drang the supreme court of the united states by a divided vote finally decided that the death penalty does not invariably violate the cruel and unusual punishment clause of the eighth amendment the court's decisions however do not moot the controversy about the death penalty or render this excellent book irrelevant the ball is now in the court of the legislature and the executive legislatures federal and state can impose or abolish the death penalty within the guidelines prescribed by the supreme court a chief executive can commute a death sentence and even the supreme court can change its mind as it has done on many occasions and did with respect to various aspects of the death penalty itself during the moratorium period also the people can change their minds some time ago a majority according to reliable polls favored abolition today a substantial majority favors imposition of the death penalty the pendulum can swing again as it has done in the past in the death penalty in america current controversies hugo adam bedau one of our preeminent scholars on the subject provides a comprehensive sourcebook on the death penalty making the process of informed consideration not only possible but fascinating as well no mere revision of the third edition of the death penalty in america which the new york times praised as the most complete well edited and comprehensive collection of readings on the pros and cons of the death penalty this volume brings together an entirely new selection of 40 essays and includes updated statistical and research data recent supreme court decisions and the best current contributions to the debate over capital punishment from the status of the death penalty worldwide to current attitudes of americans toward convicted killers from legal arguments challenging the constitutionality of the death penalty to moral arguments enlisting the new testament in support of it from controversies over the role of race and class in the judicial system to proposals to televise executions bedau gathers readings that explore all the most compelling aspects of this most compelling issue over a career spanning nearly four decades rick unclesbay has tried over one hundred murder cases before juries that ended with sixteen men and women receiving the death sentence arbitrary death depicts some of the most horrific murders in tucson arizona the author's prosecution of those cases and how the death penalty was applied it provides the framework to answer the questions why is america the only western country to still use the death penalty can a human run system treat those cases fairly and avoid unconstitutional arbitrariness it is an insider's view from someone who has spent decades prosecuting murder cases and who now argues that the death penalty doesn't work and our system is fundamentally flawed with a rational balanced approach unclesbay depicts cases that represent how different parts of the criminal justice system are responsible for the arbitrary nature of the death penalty and work against the fair application of the law the prosecution trial courts juries and appellate courts all play a part in what ultimately is a roll of the dice as to whether a defendant lives or dies arbitrary death is for anyone who wonders why and when its government seeks to legally take the life of one of its citizens it will have you questioning whether you can support a system that applies death as an arbitrary punishment and often decades after the sentence was given
