this book offers the first systematic study of the early phases in the acquisition of derivational morphology from a cross linguistic and typological perspective it presents ten empirical longitudinal studies in genealogically and typologically diverse languages indo

European Finno-Ugric Altaic with different degrees of derivational complexity. Data collection, analysis, and systematic comparison between child speech and parental child-directed speech are strictly parallel across the chapters in order to identify the productivity of a derivational pattern signalling the crucial developmental stage in its acquisition. The concept of the mini-paradigm criterion was applied: similar developmental processes can be observed in all children independent of the language they acquire, but the children's courses of development also show obvious typological differences. This points towards an important impact of the structural properties of the specific language on emergence, use, and the early course of development of derivational patterns.

This will be a tremendous addition to the social capital literature and especially teaching some of the concepts of social capital at the graduate level. Such a text is badly needed and quite remarkable that no one has published it before. Viva Ona Bartkus, University of Notre Dame. US Social Network Analysis was until recently a relatively unknown branch of sociology and anthropology. The development of menu-driven computer software packages has opened up access for a wide range of audiences including business and human resource managers. Yet the tools themselves are of little value without an understanding of the concepts that can relate the computed measures to relevant applications. Social capital provides a framework for relating the abstract world of graph theory, which underlies network analysis, to the concrete world of human behavior. This book teaches how to understand and manage social capital to facilitate individual and organizational learning and goal attainment. Coverage includes both orchestrating relationships of others and navigating one's own social interactions. Written at an introductory level and accessible to those without background in network analysis or graph theory, this text combines both comprehensive analysis and concrete concepts to emphasize how critical a role social capital's applications play on the foundations of business as we know it today. A reference book for practice and academia, this book will appeal to graduate and undergraduate students of business, business executives, and all those concerned with cultivating and refining an understanding of social capital.

The dialogue between a Christian and a Hindu about religion, Javābasvāla aīka kṛstīn āura aīka hīndu ke bāca mo imāna ke upara, was written in about 1751 by Giuseppe Maria da Gargnano with help from his Capuchin friend and colleague Cassiano da Macerata and from an unnamed Brahmin teacher. This teacher apparently taught Giuseppe Maria to read Hindustani and some Sanskrit, instructed him in the basics of Hindu religion, and corrected the Hindustani text of the dialogue. A copy of the Hindustani text was first presented to the Raja of Bettiah in 1751. Subsequently, an undetermined number of hand-made copies were distributed among persons in the Bettiah area. A copy of the Hindustani text in an Indian script related to Nagari, dated in 1751 together with an Italian version, was sent to Rome and is now in the Vatican Library (Borg. Ind. 11). Another copy of the text, dated in 1787, is also found in the same library (Borg. Ind. 16). In the context of the still limited progress of European studies of Indian languages and culture in Giuseppe Maria's historical period and despite the shortcomings of his own cultural upbringing and intellectual training, the Hindu-Christian dialogue remains a pioneering linguistic and religious experiment.
