international conflict is neither random nor inexplicable it is highly structured by antagonisms between a relatively small set of states that regard each other as rivals examining the 173 strategic rivalries in operation throughout the nineteenth and twentieth centuries this book identifies the differences rivalries make in the probability of conflict escalation and analyzes how they interact with serial crises arms races alliances and capability advantages the authors distinguish between rivalries concerning territorial disagreement space and rivalries concerning status and influence position and show how each leads to markedly different patterns of conflict escalation they argue that rivals are more likely to engage in international conflict with their antagonists than non rival pairs of states and conclude with an assessment of whether we can expect democratic peace economic development and economic interdependence to constrain rivalry induced conflict unexceptional america s empire in the persian gulf 1941 2007 examines u s policy vis à vis the persian gulf since the second world war it asserts that the american experience in this strategic yet volatile region known for its plentiful oil and gas can be best understood as an unexceptional imperial endeavor similar in kind to that of the british ottoman and other empires in previous centuries since 1941 the u s empire in the gulf has achieved successes such as operation desert storm and the invasion of iraq setbacks have included the iranian revolution and the ongoing occupation of iraq given these and many other events which this book spotlights america s gulf empire has undergone repeated expansion and contraction a typical imperial pattern the result has been a cycle of waxing and waning u s influence in a critical region of the world until its occupation of iraq the united states practiced informal empire in the gulf rather than colonialism currently however the formal empire established by the united states in iraq jeopardizes the overall american position in the gulf which seemed unassailable in early 2003 this volume examines interstate rivalries of the past 500 years providing case studies of those between land powers with continental orientations and leading maritime powers and challengers the contributors focus on the transition from commercial to strategic rivalry seminar paper from the year 2002 in the subject history of germany world war i weimar republic grade 1 a university of glasgow modern history course british foreign policy language english abstract i introduction answering the above question one must look back to the first world war various scholars have shown that the origins of tensions in anglo american relations derive mostly from problems centred on issues of the great war therefore research on this topic must start slightly before the time frame given by the above question with the examination of the time period following the first world war 1918 1920 since various issues influenced the decline of anglo american relations an essay on this topic should reasonably be arranged into the examination of different issues rather than in a chronological way factors that entailed the decline in anglo american relations in the post war period were the loss of influence and power of great britain related to the financial dependency on the united states anglo american rivalry for naval predominance anglo american rivalry concerning the world s oil and rubber resources the war debt issue and the future of the anglo japanese alliance thomas buckley has shown that a deep suspicion of britain existed within the american population and even within the american government he stated that the predominant view on britain was that of an arrogant competitor whose pretensions of leadership failed to recognise realities of british decline and american rise he reminded the community of historians of how deep rooted this suspicion was in the united states of the 1920s and 1930s the suspicions grew on the belief that britain worked only for its own interests and therefore always against the united states whose influence increased steadily a large number of americans believed that britain had manipulated the united states into the war to save its very own interests on the other side of the atlantic similar resentments dominated the 1920s british officials and media representatives pointed out regularly the american strictness on the war debt issue and the danger of loosing the world leadership the british ambassador to washington wrote in 1921 the central ambition of this realist school of american politicians is to win for america the position of leading nation in the world and also of leader among the english speaking nations to do this they intend to have the strongest navy and the largest mercantile marine they intend also to prevent us from paying our debt by sending goods to america and they look for the opportunity to treat us as a vassal state so long as the debt remains unpaid competition between america and china has intensified since 2009 creating even greater risks of conflict why is this so and what can be done about it in taming sino american rivalry feng zhang and richard ned lebow reject the prevailing idea that competition between a dominant and a rising power must necessarily lead to conflict rather they identify the mistakes that both countries have made and explain the causes and consequences of their missteps drawing on
