answers three urgent questions that all philosophers face how do philosophy and the history of philosophy relate how should philosophers generally approach the history of philosophy and what reasons should philosophers who are not historians of philosophy study the history of philosophy this book first published in 1989 the proceedings of the 19th binghamton geomorphology symposium is the first set of essays focused on the history of the subject the articles analyse the founding precepts of geomorphology the early pioneers the formation of a defined discipline and the present state of the topic this collection of articles provides rich and diverse insights into the historical dynamics of folkloristic thought with its shifting geographies shared spaces centres and borderlands by focusing on intellectual collaboration and sharing the volume also reveals the limitations barriers and boundaries inherent in scholarship and scholarly communities folklore scholars from estonia germany hungary latvia lithuania sweden and the usa reflect upon a range of related questions including to what extent and in what sense can folklore studies be regarded as a shared field of knowledge which lines of authority have held it together and what forces have led to segmentation how have the hierarchies of intellectual centres and peripheries shifted over time do national or regional styles of scholarly practice exist in folkloristics the contributors here pay attention to individual personalities the politics and economics of scholarship and forms of communication as meaningful contexts for discussing the dynamics of folklore theory and methods this book deals with theoretical problems that arise at points of contact between the concerns of philosophers and historians about the practice of historiography in bringing together these critical studies on diverse but related themes the book offers insight into the aims and methods of those working in theory of historiography in recent years especially in english speaking countries the victorian era heralded an age of transformation in which momentous changes in the field of natural history coincided with the rise of new visual technologies concurrently different parts of the british empire began to more actively claim their right to being acknowledged as indispensable contributors to knowledge and the progress of empire this book addresses the complex relationship between natural history and photography from the 1850s to the 1880s in britain and its colonies australia new zealand and to a lesser extent india coinciding with the rise of the modern museum photography s arrival was timely and it rapidly became an essential technology for recording and publicising rare objects and valuable collections also during this period the medium assumed a more significant role in the professional practices and reputations of naturalists than has been previously recognized and it figured increasingly within the expanding specialized networks that were central to the production and dissemination of new knowledge in an interrogation that ranges from the first forays into museum photography and early attempts to document collecting expeditions to the importance of traditional and photographic portraiture for the recognition of scientific discoveries this book not only recasts the parameters of what we actually identify as natural history photography in the victorian era but also how we understand the very structure of empire in relation to this genre at that time one striking weaknesses of our financial architecture which helped bring on and perhaps deepen the panic of 2008 is an inadequate appreciation of the past information about how the system functioned and the reliability of organizations and institutional controls were drawn from a relatively narrow group of recent examples history and financial crisis lessons from the 20th century is an attempt to broaden the range of historical sources used by policy makers to understand and treat financial crises many recent discussions of the 2008 panic and the economic turmoil have found the situation to either be unprecedented or greatly similar to that of 1931 however the book s wide range of contributors suggest that the economic crisis of 2008 cannot be categorised in this way this book was originally published as a special issue of business history this book sheds new light on the biographical approach in the history of physics by including the biographies of scientific objects institutions and concepts what is a biography can biographies also be written for non human subjects like scientific instruments institutions or concepts the respective chapters of this book discuss these controversial questions using examples from the history of physics by approaching biography as metaphor it transcends the boundaries between various perspectives on the history of physics and enriches our grasp of the past
