origins we call this book on theoretical orientations and methodological strategies in family studies a sourcebook because it details the social and personal roots i.e. sources from which these orientations and strategies flow thus an appropriate way to preface this book is to talk first of its roots its beginnings in the mid 1980s there emerged in some quarters the sense that it was time for family studies to take stock of itself a goal was thus set to write a book that like Janus would face both backward and forward a book that would give readers both a perspective on the past and a map for the future there were precedents for such a project the handbook of marriage and the family edited by Harold Christensen and published in 1964 the two contemporary theories about the family volumes edited by Wesley Burr Reuben Hill F. central to most sociologists self image is the claim that their theories are based on research however using a random sample of 680 articles appearing in major American British and Canadian journals Dr. Menzies shows that in some areas of sociology the wide gap between theory and research means that much of sociological theory is virtually untested he explains how theory is embodied in eight particular types of research critically examines these research theories and contrasts them with the positions of modern theorists the sample of journal articles also permits a comparison of British American and Canadian sociology by contrasting on how researchers use theories Dr. Menzies is able to reassess several theories for instance symbolic interactionist research uses embedded causal claims and stands in a dialectical relationship to other sociological research while the research version of conflict theory depends on external causes to explain social change the implications of using statistical techniques like factor analysis and regression are also considered in relation to the form of explanation
