while the uniqueness of coconut as kalpavriksha (Sanskrit meaning tree of life) marks its presence in every continent from far east to south America. Tree crops like cocoa, oil palm, rubber, apple, peach, grapes, and walnut prove their environmental sensitivity towards tropical, sub-tropical, and temperate climates. Desert climate is quintessential for date palm. Thus, from soft drinks to breweries to beverages to oil to tyres, the value addition offers a spectrum of products to human kind enriched with nutritional, environmental, financial, social, and trade-related attributes. Taxonomically, tree crops do not confine to a few families but spread across a section of genera, an attribute so unique that contributes immensely to genetic biodiversity. Even while cultivated at the commercial scale, many of these species in vogue are nurtured in their vicinity, thus ensuring their integrity in preserving the genetic biodiversity. While wheat, rice, maize, barley, soybean, cassava, and banana make up the major food staples, many fruit tree species contribute greatly to nutritional enrichment in human diet. The edible part of these species is the source of several nutrients that makes additives for the daily diet of humans, for example, vitamins, sugars, aromas, and flavour compounds, and raw material for food processing industries. Tree crops face an array of agronomic and horticultural problems in propagation, yield, appearance, quality, diseases, and pest control, abiotic stresses, and poor shelf life.

This text examines the cultivation and exploitation of the oil palm. It covers oil palm distribution and the factors necessary for successful production, as well as the important varieties of oil palm and techniques for genetic improvement. All aspects of cultivation are presented from seed selection through harvesting. Advice is given on inputs including fertilizer, equipment, and labour requirements, turning to outputs. Processing methods are described, as are the many uses and health benefits of the palm and palm kernel oils and the by-products.
