the elements of drawing by john ruskin s are indispensable and i am not without hope that the sense of secure advancement and the pleasure of independent effort may render the following out of even the more tedious exercises here proposed possible to the solitary learner without weariness but if it should be otherwise and he finds the first steps painfully irksome i can only desire him to consider whether the acquirement of so great a power as that of pictorial expression of thought be not worth some toil or whether it is likely in the natural order of matters in this working world that so great a gift should be attainable by those who will give no price for it xii one task however of some difficulty the student will find i have not imposed upon him namely learning the laws of perspective it would be worth while to learn them if he could do so easily but without a master s help and in the way perspective is at present explained in treatises the difficulty is greater than the gain for perspective is not of the slighte learn to draw the practice science of drawing with 93 illustrations diagrams the best things in an artist s work are so much a matter of intuition that there is much to be said for the point of view that would altogether discourage intellectual inquiry into artistic phenomena on the part of the artist intuitions are shy things and apt to disappear if looked into too closely and there is undoubtedly a danger that too much knowledge and training may supplant the natural intuitive feeling of a student leaving only a cold knowledge of the means of expression in its place for the artist if he has the right stuff in him has a consciousness in doing his best work of something as ruskin has said not in him but through him he has been as it were but the agent through which it has found expression the visible world is to the artist as it were a wonderful garment at times revealing to him the beyond the inner truth there is in all things he has a consciousness of some correspondence with something the other side of visible things and dimly felt through them a still small voice which he is impelled to interpret to man it is the expression of this all pervading inner significance that i think we recognise as beauty and that prompted keats to say beauty is truth truth beauty and hence it is that the love of truth and the love of beauty can exist together in the work of the artist the search for this inner truth is the search for beauty people whose vision does not penetrate beyond the narrow limits of the commonplace and to whom a cabbage is but a vulgar vegetable are surprised if they see a beautiful picture painted of one and say that the artist has idealised it meaning that he has consciously altered its appearance on some idealistic formula whereas he has probably only honestly given expression to a truer deeper vision than they had been aware of the commonplace is not the true but only the shallow view of things
