excerpt from the epistle of st jude and the second epistle of st peter greek d104 with introduction notes and comments the present volume follows mainly the same lines as my edition of the epistle of st james to which it may be considered to form a sort of appendix since the study of st james naturally leads on to the study of one who claims to be his brother and the study of st jude is inseparably connected with that of the epistle known to us as the second epistle of st peter when i began to pay special attention to the last named epistle i was of course aware of the general weakness of its canonical position as compared with that of the other books of the new testament hut my own feeling was that the traditional view must be accepted unless it could be disproved by positive evidence on the other side and i was not satisfied that such positive evidence had yet been adduced in proof of its spuriousness further consideration however of the language matter and tone of the two petrine epistles has gradually forced me to the conclusion already arrived at by

calvin and grotius as well as by many modern commentators that the second epistle is not written by the author of the first epistle a conclusion which in my view is equivalent to saying that it is not by the apostle st peter some have shrunk from this conclusion because they thought that a falsata epistola as bidimus calls it was unworthy of the place in the canon assigned to it by the church of the fourth century about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
