there has never been a book about blake's last period from his meeting with john linnell in 1818 to his death in 1827 although it includes some of his greatest works in the traveller in the evening morton paley argues that this late phase involves attitudes themes and ideas that are either distinctively new or different in emphasis from what preceded them after an introduction on blake and his milieu during this period paley begins with a chapter on blake's illustrations to thornton's edition of virgil paley relates these to blake's complex view of pastoral before proceeding to a history of the project its near abortion and its fulfillment as blake's one of greatest accomplishments as an illustrator in yah and his two sons the presentation of the divine except where it is associated with art is ambiguous where it is not negative paley takes up this separate plate in the context of artists' representations of the laocoön that would have been known to blake and also of what blake would have known of its history from classical antiquity to his own time blake's dante water colours and engravings are the most ambitious accomplishment of the last years of his life and paley shows that the problematic nature of some of these pictures with beatrice addressing dante from the car as a main example arises from blake's own divided and sharply polarized attitude toward dante's comedy the closing chapter called blake's bible is on the bible related designs and writings of blake's last years paley discusses the death of abel addressed to lord byron in the wilderness as a response to its literary forerunners especially gessner's death of abel and byron's cain for the job engravings paley shows how the border designs and the marginal texts set up a dialogue with the main illustrations unlike anything in blake's job water colours on the same subjects also included here are blake's last pictorial work on a biblical subject the genesis manuscript and blake's last writing on a biblical text his vitriolic comments on thornton's translations of the lord's prayer the title of this volume sacred marriages consciously plays with the traditional concept of sacred marriage but the plural form sacred marriages gives the reader an idea that something more is at stake here than a monomaniacal idea of manifestations deriving from a single prototype following the guidelines of one of the contributors ruben zimmermann the editors tentatively define sacred marriage as a real or symbolic union of two complementary entities imagined as gendered in a religious context sacred marriages plural then refers to various expressions of this kind of union in different cultures that seek to overcome to cite zimmermann again the great dualism of human and cosmic existence the subtitle indicates that the contributors are primarily interested in different aspects of the divine human sexual metaphor that is the imagining and reenactment of a gendered relationship between the human and divine worlds this metaphor which is essentially about relationship rather than sexual acts can find textual ritual mythical and social expressions in different times and places indeed the sacred marriage ritual itself should be considered not a manifestation of the sacralized power of sexuality experienced in sexual intercourse but one way of objectifying the divine human sexual metaphor
