this clearly written and engrossing book presents a global narrative of the origins of the modern world from 1400 to the present unlike most studies which assume that the rise of the west is the story of the coming of the modern world this history drawing upon new scholarship on asia africa and the new world and upon the maturing field of environmental history constructs a story in which those parts of the world play major roles including their impacts on the environment robert b marks defines the modern world as one marked by industry the nation state interstate warfare a large and growing gap between the wealthiest and poorest parts of the world increasing inequality within the wealthiest industrialized countries and an escape from the environmental constraints of the biological old regime he explains its origins by emphasizing contingencies such as the conquest of the new world the broad comparability of the most advanced regions in china india and europe the reasons why england was able to escape from common ecological constraints facing all of those regions by the end of the eighteenth century a conjuncture of human and natural forces that solidified a gap between the industrialized and non industrialized parts of the world the mounting environmental crisis that defines the modern world and the ways in which the forces of globalization stress the economic and political underpinnings of the modern world now in a new edition that brings the saga of the modern world to the present in an environmental context the book considers how and why the united states emerged as a world power in the twentieth century and became the sole superpower by the twenty first century and why the changed relationship of humans to the environment likely will be the hallmark of the modern era the anthropocene once again arguing that the us rise to global hegemon was contingent not inevitable marks also points to the resurgence of asia and the vastly changed relationship of humans to the environment that may in the long run overshadow any political and economic milestones of the past hundred years basing his discussion on everyday life in france lefebvre shows the degree to which our lived in world and sense of it are shaped by decisions about which we know little and in which we do not participate love in many premodern cultures extended to and permeated the world or even the cosmos but love in contemporary consumerist society tends to be sexualized romanticized and individualized as a result ancient visions of ethical love are difficult for moderns to comprehend especially those rooted in premodern western thought or native american thinkers that describe a love of the natural world that would help us live more responsibly on the earth this volume retrieves the significant narratives of love of the world and the concomitant ethical ramifications of those visions and argues that our age of science and technology has destroyed the ancient living cosmos of previous visions and replaced it with a mechanical universe this shift has resulted in various forms of destruction diminishment and forgetfulness overcoming modern world alienation requires recovering a sense of what it means to love the world and changing our practices to reflect our interconnection with it and our interdependency on it

how did the modern world get to be the way it is how did we come to live in a globalized industrialized capitalistic set of nation states moving beyond eurocentric explanations and histories that revolve around the rise of the west distinguished historian robert b marks explores the roles of asia africa and the new world in the global story he defines the modern world as marked by industry the nation state interstate warfare a large and growing gap between the wealthiest and poorest parts of the world and an escape from environmental constraints bringing the saga to the present marks considers how and why the united states emerged as a world power in the 20th century and the sole superpower by the 21st century the powerful resurgence of asia and the vastly changed relationship of humans to the environment from the roaring twenties and the group of seven to the automatistes and the early cold war canadian artists lived through and embodied an era of global tumult and change with an interweaving of historical narrative lavish illustrations and writings by many of

Canada's most revered cultural figures. Canadian Painters in a Modern World gives readers direct access to a carefully curated selection of writings, artworks, photos, and other documents that help to reconstruct the public spheres in which artists, including Paul-Émile Borduas, Emily Carr, Alex Colville, Lawren Harris, David Milne, and Pegi Nicol MacLeod, circulated. Each of the book's eight chapters consists of a narrative about a key issue or debate focusing on the relationship of art to politics and society and on how these are negotiated in an individual's life, relating artistic engagement with and responses to the Spanish Civil War, the Second World War, and the Cold War. Senechal Carney discovers a common desire for new connections between art and life, revealing continuities, ruptures, and watershed moments. This clearly written and engrossing book presents a global narrative of the origins of the modern world, unlike most studies which assume that the rise of the West is the story of the coming of the modern world. This history, drawing upon new scholarship on Asia, Africa, and the New World, constructs a story in which those parts of the world play major roles. Robert B. Marks defines the modern world as one marked by industry, the nation-state, interstate warfare, a large and growing gap between the wealthiest and poorest parts of the world, and an escape from the biological old regime. He explains its origins by emphasizing contingencies such as the conquest of the New World, the broad comparability of the most advanced regions in China, India, and Europe, the reasons why England was able to escape from common ecological constraints facing all of those regions by the 18th century, and a conjuncture of human and natural forces that solidified a gap between the industrialized and non-industrialized parts of the world. The sequel and companion volume to Clayton Kopp's ground-breaking The Birth of the Modern World, 1780-1914, this wide-ranging and sophisticated study explores global history since the first world war, offering a coherent comparative overview of developments in politics, economics, and society at large. Written by one of the leading historians of his generation, an early intellectual leader in the study of world history, weaves a clear narrative history that explores the themes of politics, economics, social, cultural, and intellectual life throughout the long twentieth century. Identifies the themes of state, capital, and communication as key drivers of change on a global scale in the last century and explores the impact of those ideas. Interrogates whether warfare was really the pre-eminent driving force of twentieth-century history and what other ideas shaped the course of history in this period. Explores the causes behind the resurgence of local conflict rather than global-scale conflict in the years since the turn of the millennium. Delves into the narrative of inequality, a story that has shaped and been shaped by the events of the last hundred years. Part of the Blackwell History of the World series, the goal of this ambitious series is to provide an accessible source of knowledge about the entire human past for every curious person in every part of the world it will comprise some two dozen volumes of which some provide synoptic views of the history of particular regions while others consider the world as a whole during a particular period of time the volumes are narrative in form giving balanced attention to social and cultural history in the broadest sense as well as to institutional development and political change each provides a systematic account of a very large subject but they are also both imaginative and interpretative the series is intended to be accessible to the widest possible readership and the accessibility of its volumes is matched by the style of presentation and production it is no longer news that the western world is in a crisis a crisis that has spread far beyond its point of origin and become global in nature in 1927 ren gu non responded to this crisis with the closest thing he ever wrote to a manifesto and call to action the crisis of the modern world was his most direct and complete application of traditional metaphysical principles particularly that of the age of darkness preceding the end of the present world to social criticism surpassed only by the reign of quantity and the signs of the times his magnum opus in the present work gu non ruthlessly exposes the western deviation its loss of tradition its exaltation of action over knowledge its rampant individualism and general social chaos his response to these conditions was not activist however but purely intellectual envisioning the coming together of western intellectual leaders capable under favorable circumstances of returning the west to its traditional roots most likely via the catholic church or under less favorable ones of at least preserving the seeds of tradition for the time to come
