this collection of essays covering a broad historical range shows that women working in theatre and drama since the time of aphra behn have been engaged in pushing the boundaries of conventional representation and dramaturgical convention collectively the authors show that women have used performing spaces as a channel for both political and personal radicalism one that has demanded and celebrated experimentalism as a kind of survival in a male dominated world the concept of the border evoked by the title of the present volume provides a central interpretative key for our project at more than one level as it is suggestive both of scotland as a theoretical borderland in relation to the empire and postcoloniality and of our attempt at bringing into dialogue scholars from different disciplinary backgrounds including scottish celtic and postcolonial studies the scotland of the present volume s title is thus suggestive of a critical standpoint this book participates in the modern recovery of the memory of the long forgotten relationship between scotland and the caribbean drawing on theoretical paradigms of world literature and transnationalism it argues that caribbean slavery profoundly shaped scotland s economic social and cultural development and draws out the implications for current debates on scotland s national narratives of identity eighteenth to nineteenth century scottish writers are re examined in this new light morris explores the ways that discourses of improvement in both scotland and the caribbean are mediated by the modes of pastoral and georgic which struggle to explain and contain the labour conditions of agricultural labourers both free and enslaved the ambivalent relationship of scottish writers including robert burns to questions around abolition allows fresh perspectives on the era furthermore morris considers the origins of a hybrid scottish creole identity through two nineteenth century figures robert wedderburn and mary seacole the final chapter moves forward to consider the implications for post devolution post referendum scotland underpinning this investigation is the conviction that collective memory is a key feature which shapes behaviour and beliefs in the present the recovery of the memory of slavery is performed here in the interests of social justice in the present
