how did early modern english people write about themselves and how do we listen to their voices four centuries later the authors of early modern english lives autobiography and self representation 1500 1660 argue that identity is depicted through complex subtle and often contradictory social interactions and literary forms diaries letters daily spiritual reckonings household journals travel journals accounts of warfare incidental meditations on the nature of time death and self reflection as well as life stories themselves these are just some of the texts that allow us to address the social and historical conditions that influenced early modern self writing the texts explored in early modern english lives do not automatically speak to our familiar patterns of introspection and self inquiry often formal highly metaphorical and emotionally restrained they are very different in both tone and purpose from the autobiographies that crowd bookshelves today does the lack of emotional description suggest that complex emotions themselves in all the depth and variety that we now understand and expect of them are a relatively modern phenomenon this is one of the questions addressed by early modern english lives the authors bring to our attention the kinds of rhetorical and generic features of early modern self representation that can help us to appreciate people living four hundred years ago as the complicated composite figures they were people whose expression of identity involved an elaborate interplay of roles and discourses and for whom the notion of privacy itself was a wholly different phenomenon originally published in 1969 in the seventeenth century neither the literary genre nor the term autobiography existed but we see in seventeenth century literature many kinds of autobiographical writings to which their authors gave such titles as journal of the life of me confessions etc this work is a study of nearly two hundred of these published and unpublished which together represent a very varied group of writings the book begins with an examination of the rise of autobiography as a genre during the renaissance it discusses seventeenth century autobiographical writings under two main headings religious where the autobiographies are grouped according to the denomination of their writer and secular where a wide variety of writings is examined including accounts of travel and of military and political life as well as more personal accounts autobiographies by women are treated separately and the author shows that they in general have a deeper revelation of sentiments and more subtle self analyses than is found in comparable works by men sources and influences are recorded and also the essential historical details of each work this book gives a critical analysis of the autobiographies as literary works and suggests relationships between them and the culture and society of their time review of the original publication a contribution to cultural history which is of quite exceptional merit its subject is of great intrinsic interest and manifest importance and professor delany has treated it with exemplary thoroughness lucidity and intelligence lionel trilling
