of 1850 second and of considerable interest to historians the transcription shows that less than 10 percent of the georgia white population owned slaves in 1850 in fact by far the largest number of slave owners were concentrated in glynn county a coastal county known for its rice production the slave owners census is arranged in alphabetical order according to the surname of the slave owner and gives his her full name number of slaves owned and the county of residence it is one of the great disappointments of the ante bellum u s population census that the slaves themselves are not identified by name rather merely as property owned nevertheless now that mr cox has made the names of these georgia slave owners with their aggregations of slaves more widely available it may be just possible that more persons with slave ancestors will be able to trace them via other records property records for example pertaining to the 37 000 slave owners enumerated in this new volume

this volume contains the names of 52 000 georgia heads of household giving for each the county of residence and page number in the census where his name appears individuals are indexed alphabetically by surname a particularly interesting feature of the book is the method of dealing with variant spellings all names of like sound are grouped together the variants being arranged in order of the most frequently used spelling so the researcher is unlikely to miss a name through oversight or carelessness the compiler of the book moreover was a nationally known figure in federal administration programs and a certified genealogist this first book length examination of the georgia pine belt challenges the conventional view of this area as an unchanging economic backwater by examining its postbellum evolution from an independent agricultural economy to one entirely dependent upon a single unstable crop cotton before the civil war the georgia piney woods region easily supported a population of mostly self sufficient yeomen and livestock herders after the war a variety of external forces invaded the region propelling the economy through three stages of social political and economic change that permanently altered the landscape spearheaded by new south boosters like henry grady these invasions were intended to create a south with a diversified economic future bright with industry and self sufficient agriculture the first stage did see economic advancement in the form of transportation routes including railroads that opened up the pine belt s forests to the second stage of change industrialized sawmilling and turpentine this second stage created new jobs but failed to bring in other industries leaving the area dependent upon an industry that destroyed the antebellum open range herding system and brought deforestation within a generation the lumber industry s demise led to the final stage of change which saw new south boosters in an attempt to curtail the economic malaise promoting the deforested lands to a wave of newcomers immigrant cotton farmers from the upcountry hungry for new lands with no other industries to compete with them cotton farmers came to dominate the area s economic life even more than before the civil war by 1910 few georgia pinelanders doubted that a new south had arrived but it was not the diversified landscape that henry grady and others had originally envisioned it was instead a land of cotton much like the one that had come to dominate life across the rest of the pine belt from virginia to east texas mark v wetherington s in depth study of this region sheds new light on its socioeconomic history and encourages a closer examination of the often ignored histories of other areas
