focusing on two case studies from east asia and europe yinan he argues that the key to interstate reconciliation is the harmonization of national memories over recent years there has been increasing interest in the relationship between china and japan particularly as a way of understanding contemporary political economic and security developments within the whole east asia region caroline rose presents a thorough balanced and objective examination of both sides of the relationship this will be of great interest to academics and policy makers in the uk and us as well as to professionals working in chinese and japanese communities this silk road paper is an analysis of four determinants which will ultimately shape the final reconciliation between asia s two giants the first part analyzes the tumultuous history between china and japan over the past 3 000 years with special emphasis on the tang nara yuan hei an and the qing meiji periods of sino japanese history before the two catastrophic wars between them in 1894 95 and 1931 1945 the spectacular reconciliation of 1972 and the present day ups and downs in contemporary politics between beijing and tokyo the second part looks at how political determinants may ultimately dominate economic determinism it is believed that although economic determinism which is very much a part of the western liberal thinking in conflict management and resolution may be important to prevent conflicts it will most probably not seal an ultimate sino japanese reconciliation political determinants will remain the ultimate key the third part looks at how two seemingly extraneous yet crucial issues could have an enormous impact on the future direction of sino japanese rapprochement the korean and taiwan issues these two issues have been historically intertwined with the history and emotions of sino japanese relations and will continue to be so as long as these issues are not ultimately resolved lastly sino japanese relations must also be seen from a wider perspective of the strategic geo political rivalry between tokyo and beijing in asia and the ensuing tectonic shift of alliances in the asia pacific china s advances into southeast asia to the detriment of japan beijing s growing tussle concomitant cooperation and rivalry with the united states in the world with japan firmly on the american side and the place of both china and japan in the post kuala lumpur east asia summit held on 14 december 2005 all constitute important factors in this important tectonic shift which would in turn also dictate the pace of an ultimate sino japanese reconciliation reconciliation is an important agenda for postwar countries it plays a major role in harmonizing bilateral and regional relations lin ren compares reconciliations between the sino japanese and the franco german dyads each dyad shares a deep rooted historic antagonism nevertheless france and germany reached a far deeper degree of reconciliation therefore this book devotes to explore the trouble creators that led to the diverse outcomes so as to challenge taking rationality as the single micro foundation of decision making concerning reconciliation taking a comparative approach and bringing together perspectives from japan china korea and taiwan this volume considers former japanese prime minister tomiichi murayama s 1995 apology statement the height of japan s post war apology and examines its implications for memory international relations and reconciliation in asia contemporary east asian societies are still struggling with complex legacies of colonialism war and domination years of japanese imperial occupation followed by the cold war have entrenched competing historical understandings of responsibility for past crimes in korea china japan and elsewhere in the region in this context even the impressive economic and cultural networks that have developed over the past sixty years have failed to secure peaceful coexistence and overcome lingering attitudes of distrust and misunderstanding in the region this book examines the challenges of historical reconciliation in east asia and in doing so calls for a reimagining of how we understand both historical identity and responsibility it suggests that by adopting a forward looking approach that eschews obsession with the past in favour of a reflective and deliberative engagement with history real progress can be made towards peaceful coexistence in east asia with chapters that focus on select experiences from east asia while simultaneously situating them within a wider comparative perspective the contributors to this volume focus on the close relationship between reconciliation and inherited responsibility and reveal the contested nature of both concepts finally this volume suggests that historical reconciliation is essential for strengthening mutual trust between the states and people of east asia and suggests ways in which such divisive legacies of conflict can be overcome providing both an overview of the theoretical arguments surrounding reconciliation and inherited responsibility alongside examples of these concepts from across east asia this book will be valuable to students and scholars interested in asian politics asian history and international relations more broadly this edited collection explores how east asia s painful history continues to haunt the relationships between its countries and peoples through a largely social psychological and constructivist lens the authors examine the ways in which historical memory and unmet identity needs generates mutual suspicion xenophobic nationalism and tensions in the bilateral and trilateral relationships within the region this text not only addresses some of the domestic drivers of japanese chinese and south korean foreign policy and the implications of increasingly autocratic rule in all three countries but also analyses the way in which new security mechanisms and processes advancing trust confidence and reconciliation can replace those generating mistrust antagonism and insecurity
