It has been so long but he is gone. Pass it on. Started by me attending a volunteer session to work on the temple at 4th and State in Pine Bluff. As I did not know that I would begin my education in masonry there, I was challenged by Howard Woods on what I was wearing. He said I did a good job of answering the question, but that masonry was much deeper than emblems. He said if you want to learn, I will be here every Saturday to teach. The teaching was great but also provided a meal on Saturday, and that made it the greatest. To a college student, I went on to be the president and founder of the Haygood 357 Study Club on the campus of the University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff, and from that point I have continued in masonry to this day.

By looking at the activities of Taoist clerics in Peking, this book explores the workings of religion as a profession in one Chinese city during a period of dramatic modernization. The author focuses on ordinary religious professionals, most of whom remained obscure temple employees, although almost forgotten, they were all major actors in urban religious and cultural life. The clerics at the heart of this study spent their time training disciples, practicing and teaching self-cultivation, performing rituals, and managing temples. Vincent Goossaert shows that these Taoists were neither the socially despised illiterates dismissed in so many studies, nor otherworldly ascetics, but active participants in the religious economy of the city. In exploring exactly what their crucial role was, he addresses the day-to-day life of modern Chinese religion from the perspective of ordinary religious specialists. This approach highlights the social processes, institutions, and networks that transmit religious knowledge and mediate between prestigious religious traditions and the people in the street. In modern Chinese religion, the Taoists are such key
