in this volume richard creel sets forth a thesis that offers a third way to approach divine impassibility defining impassibility as imperviousness to causal influence from external factors creel sketches a path between aquinas and hartshorne by asserting that once this definition is accepted one must still distinguish the various respects in which god is or is not impassible virtually no one would dispute that the divine nature is impassible god will never cease to be god no matter what happens in creation with respect to the divine knowledge and will however there are conflicting views creel claims that god's will is impassible because god knows everything that can be accomplished by divine power yet unlike aquinas creel believes that god has this knowledge in virtue of a plenum of possibilities eternally coexistent with the divine being the absolute is not simply god but rather god plus the plenum creel suggests that god's knowledge is passible with respect to the contingent future actions of creatures god knows these actions therefore not in their presentiality from all eternity as aquinas would hold but only as they happen and become actual god's will however remains immediately impassible because the divine will is ordered to possibilities not actualities god never has to wait until after we do something in order to decide his response to it he has eternally decided his response to all that we might do ultimately god's feelings remain impassible no matter what concrete decisions human beings make because the basic intent of the divine plan for us is always achieved we exercise our freedom to choose for or against god god is impassible with respect to the divine nature divine will and divine feelings but god is passible with respect to the divine knowledge of future contingent events
