some of medieval culture s most arresting images and stories inextricably associate love and death thus the troubadour jaufre rudel dies in the arms of the countess of tripoli having loved her from afar without ever having seen her or in marie de france s chevrefoil tristan and iseult s fatal love is hauntingly symbolized by the fatally entwined honeysuckle and hazel and who could forget the ethereal spectacle of the damoisele of escalot s body carried to camelot on a supernatural funerary boat with a letter on her breast explaining how her unrequited love for lancelet killed her medieval literature is fascinated with the idea that love may be a fatal affliction indeed it is frequently suggested that true love requires sacrifice that you must be ready to die for from and in love love in other words is represented sometimes explicitly as a form of martyrdom a notion that is repeatedly reinforced by courtly literature s borrowing of religious vocabulary and imagery the paradigm of the martyr to love has of course remained compelling in the early modern and modern period this book seeks to explore what is at stake in medieval literature s preoccupation with love s martyrdom informed by modern theoretical approaches particularly lacanian psychoanalysis and jacques derrida's work on ethics it offers new readings of a wide range of french and occitan courtly texts from the twelfth and thirteenth centuries and argues that a new secular ethics of desire emerges from courtly literature because of its fascination with death this book also examines the interplay between lyric and romance in courtly literary culture and shows how courtly literature's predilection for sacrificial desire imposes a repressive sex gender system that may then be subverted by fictional women and queers who either fail to die on cue or who die in troublesome and disruptive ways love and death are two major facets of the whole of human existence and in the drama of love and death carpenter attempts to analyse the interplay of love and death in everyday life originally published in 1912 this study focuses on how love and death are perceived and treated in the history of humankind and how these views evolved up until the early twentieth century this title will be of interest to students of sociology and anthropology bassein examines the pervasive linkage between women's sexuality and death in western thought and literature and concludes that there is no reasonable basis for much of it she first explores how language reveals and reinforces the bond between women and death she then discusses traditional christianity as a vehicle for perpetuating this tie and demonstrates that negative attitudes and brutality associated with women find expression in otherwise commendable works of art the author examines nineteenth and twentieth century fiction and poetry to show the different ways writers have handled women in sexual situations bassein concludes that tracing the origins and prevalence of the automatic association and seeking alternatives help us recognize the irrational and unconscious tendencies that are at the basis of stereotype formation and tacit acceptance of brutality
