the art of series is a new line of books reinvigorating the practice of craft and criticism each book will be a brief witty and useful exploration of fiction nonfiction or poetry by a writer impassioned by a singular craft issue the art of volumes will provide a series of sustained examinations of key but sometimes neglected aspects of creative writing by some of contemporary literature s finest practioners poetry is the sound of language organized in lines james longenbach opens this provocative book with that essential statement through a range of examples from shakespeare and milton to ashbery and glück longenbach describes the function of line in metered rhymed syllabic and free verse poetry the art of the poetic line is a vital new resource by one of america s most important critics and most engaging poets it takes just one glimpse of charles simic s work to establish that he is a master ruler of his own eccentric kingdom of jittery syntax and signature insight los angeles times for over fifty years charles simic has been widely celebrated for his brilliant and innovative poetic imagery his sardonic wit and a voice all his own he has been awarded nearly every major literary prize for his poetry including a pulitzer and a macarthur grant in addition to serving as the poet laureate of the united states in 2007 and 2008 in this new volume he distills his life s work combining for the first time the best of his early poems with his later works including nearly three dozen revisions along with seventeen new never before published poems simic s body of work draws inspiration from a range of topics from the inscrutability of ordinary life to american blues from folktales to marriage and war consistently exciting and unexpected the nearly four hundred poems in this volume represent the best of one of america s most distinguished and original poets

this study initiates a fresh approach to the study of biblical hebrew poetry by exploring the biblical hebrew poetic line as a perceptual phenomenon that functions within the bounds of human cognitive constraints the primary theoretical framework is drawn from the cognitive poetics work of reuven tsur who proposes two important cognitive constraints on versification the limitations and capacities of short term memory and the gestalt principles or conditions that maximize the mind s tendency to perceive a stimulus pattern as an integrated whole these constraints enable us to study the line as a perceptual phenomenon in principled ways the main inquiry of this study is how to lineate biblical hebrew poetic texts what principles are relevant for lineation and what the rationale is behind those principles unlike previous efforts to lineate biblical hebrew poetry which focus on meter syntax parallelism or masoretic cantillation marks pausal forms this study begins by considering the nature of the poetic line in the context of how it is perceived this perception oriented approach to lineation views poetic lines as textual groupings or shapes that potentially emerge in mental performance with varying degrees of strength it views the poetic line as both a perceptual part and a perceptual whole and asks how parts emerge as wholes and how wholes break into parts on all levels of language this approach is broadly applicable to many poems but it is also highly contextual a line is perceived as a part and a whole only in relation to other lines the corpus of poems includes eight poems embedded in narrative and the five poems of lamentations the analyses of these poems demonstrate the significance of this study it provides explanatory power for the phenomenon of the line solves various problems of lineating texts and gives insights into the message structure and artistry of the poems a perceptual approach allows us to study the verse line as a human cognitive phenomenon that takes on specific cultural forms within the conventions of a particular verse system and it opens the door for dialogue about broader poetic effects based upon the same cognitive poetics principles
