argues for new models of reading the complexity and subversiveness of fourteen post classical sagas the late sagas of icelanders thought to be written in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries have hitherto received little scholarly attention previous generations of critics have unfavourably compared them to classical Íslendingasögur and fornaldarsögur leading modern audiences to project their expectations onto narratives that do not adhere to simple taxonomies and preconceived notions of genre as rogues within the canon they challenge the established notions of what makes an Íslendingasaga based on a critical appraisal of conceptualisations of canon and genre in saga literature this book offers a new reading of the relationship between the individual paranormal and social dimensions that form the foundation of these sagas it draws on a multidisciplinary approach informed by perspectives as diverse as possible worlds theory gender studies and social history the post classical sagas are not only read anew and integrated into both their generic and socio historical context they are met on their own terms allowing their fascinating narratives to speak for themselves
