explores south west england s development from the iron age through medieval times focusing on ippelen this book explores the distinctive landscape and society of south west england that had emerged by the iron age and which continued to develop during the roman and medieval periods a focus of the research was the long term programme of survey and excavation on the iron age roman and early medieval settlement at dainton elms cross in ippelen devon which included the only roman roadside settlement to have seen extensive excavation to the south and west of exeter on the very edge of the roman empire as well as a substantial early medieval cemetery first discovered through the reporting of an unusual concentration of roman finds to the portable antiquities scheme the site was investigated through a joint university and community project led by the university of exeter in partnership with the british museum pas devon county council and cotswold archaeology what for the south west of england was exceptional preservation meant that large amounts of animal bone charred cereals and human remains were preserved alongside a regionally important material culture assemblage the site which had been occupied for c 1200 years was abandoned around the 8th century ad a programme of documentary place name and historic landscape research across a study area extending from the coast up onto Dartmoor explores the context of this major landscape change which appears to have been associated with the appearance of hamlets and open fields and the fragmentation of an early folk territory together the excavations in Ipplepen and the wider contextual research reveal how communities living in South West England developed a distinctive identity that reflects a well developed understanding of their region's natural environment alongside a degree of ambivalence to outside cultural influences the 19th century historic landscape of Devon developed from earlier patterns of landholdings and settlement that are today not always easily discernible on the ground the study of tithe survey landholdings field names and associated documentary evidence together with the physical evidence of change and development through field and settlement pattern can be used to elucidate the relationship between field and settlement morphologies and patterns of 19th century landholding the combined evidence for three case study areas the Blackdown Hills Hartland Moors and the South Hams is examined in detail though the creation manipulation and querying of a geographical information systems GIS database key issues addressed include how far back patterns of 19th century landholding can be traced or projected back into the medieval period the occurrence and extent of open field farming in Devon and the spread of nucleated and dispersed settlements looking beyond the physical aspects of landscapes the idea of landscape pays and the identification of regional differences in the study of the historic landscape are investigating revealing how closely entwined are the physical and social landscapes of this historic county first published in 1998 this book aims to accommodate for the little attention paid to the needs of the people living in rural Britain the author argues that there has hardly been an attempt to describe the impact of new machines and of new wage levels on farm and village the title sets out to answer two key questions can the traditional pattern of settlement survive and has depopulation in the truly rural areas gone so far as to undermine the viability of the small villages and hamlets
