in this international collection of papers there is a wealth of knowledge on artificial intelligence ai and cognitive science cs techniques applied to the problem of providing help systems mainly for the unix operating system the research described here involves the representation of technical computer concepts but also the representation of how users conceptualise such concepts the collection looks at computational models and systems such as uc yucca and oscon programmed in languages such as lisp prolog ops 5 and c which have been developed to provide unix help these systems range from being menu based to ones with natural language interfaces some providing active help intervening when they believe the user to have misconceptions and some based on empirical studies of what users actually do while using unix further papers investigate planning and knowledge representation where the focus is on discovering what the user wants to do and figuring out a way to do it as well as representing the knowledge needed to do so there is a significant focus on natural language dialogue where consultation systems can become active incorporating user modfelling natural language generation and plan recognition modelling metaphors and users mistaken beliefs much can be learned from seeing how ai and cs techniques can be investigated in depth while being applied to a real test bed domain such as help on unix this book offers detailed readings of relevant works by blake shelley and keats to bring together what is loosely termed as hermetic tradition british romantic poetry and responses to the present crises regarding our life on the planet including those linked to the notion of posthumanism this conjunction of forces so to speak points beyond the boundaries erected by general sociological complacency and the acceptance of humankind as the centre of existence on earth to affirm the value of the non human world and the possibilities inherent in an awareness of its subtler manifestations although the idea of spiritual agency might stretch the bounds of credulity for centuries the inspired imagination has been considered daemonic that is it brings to artists and poets and certain scientists indeed a sense of heightened consciousness seemingly from beyond the self whatever causality may be at play here it is clear that instances of an exalted outlook on life exist in abundance in the poetry of blake shelley and keats the present book explores them and their implications if every outlet for book criticism suddenly disappeared if all we had were reviews that treated books like any other commodity could the novel survive in a gauntlet throwing essay at the start of this brilliant assemblage cynthia ozick stakes the claim that just as surely as critics require a steady supply of new fiction novelists need great critics to build a vibrant community on the foundation of literary history for decades ozick herself has been one of our great critics as these essays so clearly display she offers models of critical analysis of writers from the mid twentieth century to today from saul bellow bernard malamud and kafka to william gass and martin amis all assembled in provocatively named groups fanatics monsters figures and others uncompromising and brimming with insight these essays are essential reading for anyone facing the future of literature in the digital age
