emphasizes the conservative bent that guided the young statesman's remarkable political evolution, revealing a Lincoln who was increasingly driven by his antislavery sentiments and fear for the republic in the hands of the Democrats like Stephen Douglas as much as if not more than his own political ambition.

The first birth control clinic in El Paso, Texas, opened in 1937. Since then Mexican origin women living in the border cities of El Paso and Ciudad Juárez have confronted various interest groups determined to control their reproductive lives, including a heavily funded international population control campaign led by Planned Parenthood Federation of America as well as the Catholic Church and Mexican American activists. Uncovering nearly one hundred years of struggle, Lina María Murillo reveals how Mexican origin women on both sides of the border fought to reclaim autonomy and care for themselves and their communities. Faced with a family planning movement steeped in eugenic ideology, working class Mexican origin women strategically demanded additional health services and then formed their own clinics to provide care on their own terms. Along the way they developed what Murillo calls reproductive care: quotidian acts of community solidarity as activists organized for better housing, education, wages as well as access to birth control, abortion and more. Centering the agency of these women and communities, Murillo lays bare Mexican origin women's long battle for human dignity and power in the borderlands as reproductive freedom in Texas once again hangs in the balance.

Women in World History brings together the most recent scholarship in women's and world history in a single volume covering the period from 1450 to the present, enabling readers to understand women's relationship to world developments over the past five hundred years. Women have served the world as unfree people, often forced to migrate as slaves, trafficked sex workers and indentured laborers working off debts. Diseases have migrated through women's bodies and women themselves have deliberately spread religious belief and fervor as well as ideas. They have been global authors, soldiers and astronauts encircling the globe and moving far beyond it. They have written classics in political and social thought and crafted literary and artistic works alongside others who were revolutionaries and reform-minded activists. Historical scholarship has shown that there is virtually no part of the world where women's presence is not manifest whether in archives oral testimonials personal papers the material record evidence of disease and famine myth and religious teachings and myriad other forms of documentation as these studies mount the idea of surveying women's past on a global basis becomes daunting this book aims to redress this situation and offer a synthetic world history of women in modern times
