can poetry articulate something about love that philosophy cannot the form of love argues that it can in close readings of seven metaphysical poems the book shows how poets of the early modern period and beyond use poetic form to turn philosophy to other ends in order not to represent the truth about love but to create a virtual experience of love in all its guises the form of love shows how verse creates love that can't exist without poetry's specific affordances and how poems can in their impossibility prompt love's radical reimagining like the philosophies on which they draw metaphysical poems imagine love as an intense form of non-sovereignty of giving up control they even imagine love as a liberating bondage to a friend a beloved a saint a god or a garden yet these poems create strange striking versions of such love made in rather than through the devices structures and forces where love appears tracing how poems think kuzner argues requires an intimate form of reading close even too close attention to and thinking with the text showing how poetry thinks of love otherwise than other fields the book reveals how poetry and philosophy can nevertheless enter into a relation that is itself like love leone s dialogues consists of three conversations on love and desire on the universality of love and on the origin of love that take place over a period of three subsequent days they are organized in a dialogic format much like a theatrical representation of a conversation between a man philo who plays the role of the lover and teacher and a woman sophia the beloved and pupil the discussion covers a wide range of topics that have as their common denominator the idea of love through the dialogue the author explores many different points of view and complex philosophical ideas grounded in a distinctly jewish tradition and drawing on neoplatonic philosophical structures and arabic sources the work offers a useful compendium of classical and contemporary thought yet was not incompatible with christian doctrine
