this book seeks to decolonize practices of arms control and disarmament in this endeavor it seeks to problematize our understanding of time and civilization as rhetorical resources the need for such an undertaking can be premised on the claim that while problems of modernity ethnocentrism and universalism are now a central concern within the field of international relations these ideas are scarcely debated or contested within the field of arms control and disarmament the singular focus on technological innovations and specific policy oriented agreements in practices of arms control and disarmament appears to stymie the need for such engagements this book is an invitation to explore intersecting discourses on colonialism racialism nationalism and humanitarianism within a historically grounded terrain of weapons control an understanding of these practices is vital not to prescribe any standards of civilization or exceptionalism in weapons control but to be cognizant through critique of the dangers embedded in any effort at reconstellating the constitutional nuclear order we are living through the endtimes of the civilizing mission the ineffectual international criminal court and its disastrous first prosecutor luis moreno ocampo along with the failure in syria of the responsibility to protect are the latest pieces of evidence not of transient misfortunes but of fatal structural defects in international humanism whether it is the increase in deadly attacks on aid workers the torture and disappearing of al qaeda suspects by american officials the flouting of international law by states such as sri lanka and sudan or the shambles of the khmer rouge tribunal in phnom penh the prospect of one world under secular human rights law is receding what seemed like a dawn is in fact a sunset the foundations of universal liberal norms and global governance are crumbling from the endtimes of human rightsin a book that is at once passionate and provocative stephen hopgood argues against the conventional wisdom that the idea of universal human rights has become not only ill adapted to current realities but also overambitious and unresponsive a shift in the global balance of power away from the united states further undermines the foundations on which the global human rights regime is based american decline exposes the contradictions hypocrisies and weaknesses behind the attempt to enforce this regime around the world and opens the way for resurgent religious and sovereign actors to challenge human rights historically hopgood writes universal humanist norms inspired a sense of secular religiosity among the new middle classes of a rapidly modernizing europe human rights were the product of a particular worldview western european and christian and specific historical moments humanitarianism in the nineteenth century the aftermath of the holocaust they were an antidote to a troubling contradiction the coexistence of a belief in progress with horrifying violence and growing inequality the obsolescence of that founding purpose in the modern globalized world has hopgood asserts transformed the institutions created to perform it such as the international committee of the red cross and recently the international criminal court into self perpetuating structures of intermittent power and authority that mask their lack of democratic legitimacy and systematic ineffectiveness at their best they provide relief in extraordinary situations of great distress otherwise they are serving up a mixture of false hope and unaccountability sustained by human rights as a global brand the endtimes of human rights is sure to be controversial hopgood makes a plea for a new understanding of where hope lies for human rights a plea that mourns the promise but rejects the reality of universalism in favor of a less predictable encounter with the diverse realities of today s multipolar world at the turn of the millennium a new phenomenon emerged conservatives who just decades before had rejected the expanding human rights culture began to embrace human rights in order to advance their political goals in this book nicola perugini and neve gordon account for how human rights generally conceived as a counter hegemonic instrument for righting historical injustices are being deployed to further subjugate the weak and legitimize domination using israel palestine as its main case study the human right to dominate describes the establishment of settler ngos that appropriate human rights to dispossess indigenous palestinians and military think tanks that rationalize lethal violence by invoking human rights the book underscores the increasing convergences between human rights ngos security agencies settler organizations and extreme right nationalists showing how political actors of different stripes champion the dissemination of human rights and mirror each other s political strategies indeed perugini and gordon demonstrate the multifaceted role that this discourse is currently playing in the international arena on the one hand human rights have become the lingua franca of global moral speak while on the other they have become reconstrued as a tool for enhancing domination
